Wire Tapping Is Outlawed In District Gaming Case

Justice Cox Orders All Evidence Quashed in Plisco Indictments.

U. S. to Take Up Appeal Question

Robb Said Ruling Would Make Trial Useless, Judge Recalls.

In an opinion virtually outlawing any kind of wire-tapping in Washington, Justice Joseph W. Cox, in District Court late yesterday ordered "suppressed" and "quashed" all evidence seized by Federal and District police in their campaign to do away with a news distributing agency—Telecast—which was broadcasting through private hook-ups race track information to scores of "spots" in the District.

The opinion crippled an indictment returned against Abe Plisco, William Cahill, and 30 others who were charged with conspiracy to violate the gaming laws of the District.

They were arrested and indicted as a result of a raid on a suite in the Albee Building a year ago after Federal and local police had tapped wires leading into the offices and had made stenographic copies of conversations.

Appeal Held Possible.

Shortly after the decision was made public, David A. Pine, acting United States attorney, said: "The opinion of Justice Cox grants motions to quash search warrants and to suppress the use of evidence obtained thereunder, on the ground that the affidavits on which the search warrants were issued were based on information obtained by intra-District of Columbia wire-tapping. This does not result in a final judgment upon the indictment from which an appeal can be taken."

Justice Cox, in the opinion, pointed out that Roger Robb, assistant United States attorney in charge of the case, had admitted that without the wire-tapping evidence the case would collapse.

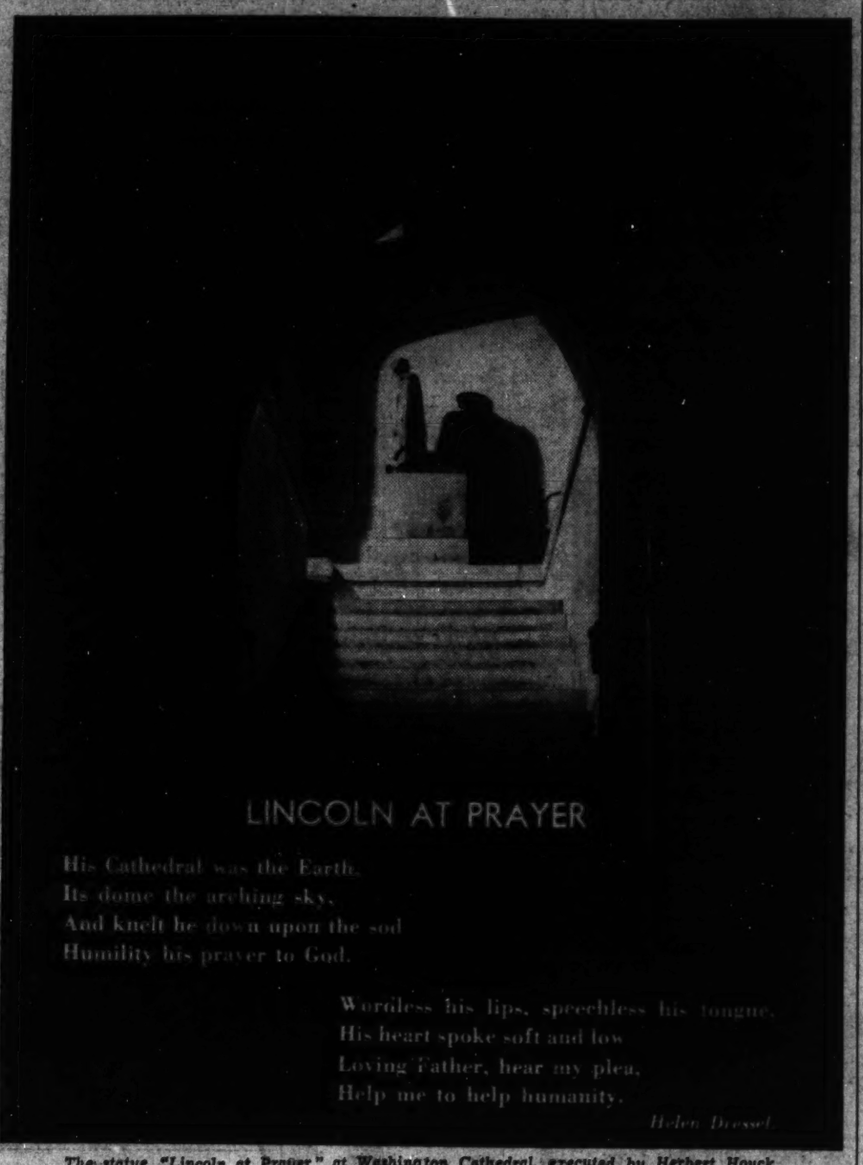
Still remaining before the justice is the question of determining a motion by one of the defendants to quash the indictment which also involves wire-tapping. If there is a final adjudication that his name is not to be included in the 32, the Government will then take up with the Department of Justice the question of appeal. The question involved includes the names of various aliases which were overheard by agents in their wire-tapping.

Federal Act Quoted.

In his opinion, Justice Cox stated: "No person not being authorized by the sender shall intercept any communication and divulge or publish the existence, contents, substance, purport, effect or meaning of such intercepted communication to any person." The quotations were obtained from the F. C. C. act.

Concluding his ruling, Justice Cox wrote: "The Nardone decision purports to declare the rule as to admissibility in evidence of intercepted messages in view of the provisions of section 605 of the communications act. It plainly denies that evidence procured by even a Federal officer's tapping telephone wires and intercepting messages is admissible in a criminal trial in a United States District Court."

Because of the lateness with which the opinion was returned the district attorney's office said it was not possible accurately to estimate if any other cases were to be affected by the ruling.



LINCOLN AT PRAYER
His Cathedral was the Earth,
Its dome the arching sky,
And knelt he down upon the sod
Humility his prayer to God.
Wordless his lips, speechless his tongue,
His heart spoke soft and low
Loving Father, hear my plea,
Help me to help humanity.

Attacks Delay Vote on Farm Crop Control

Administration's Program Called Un-American; Unconstitutional.

By Robert C. Albright.

An opposition blast at the Administration's crop control program as "totally unconstitutional and un-American" yesterday delayed a final vote on the farm bill after the Senate overwhelmingly refused to send the controversial measure back to committee.

Shaking a finger at Democratic colleagues, Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, inveighed against "the great pity of passing this bill, knowing, as I do, it will fall to the ground in the courts."

Bailey joined in a bi-partisan assault opened earlier when Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, called the farm bill conference report a "legislative jigsaw puzzle" which no five Senators could explain.

Hopes Banished.

The North Carolinian's long opposition speech banished Administration hopes of enacting the bill this week, and agreement was reached to vote at 3:30 p. m. Monday. Despite solid Republican and scattered Democratic dairy bloc opposition, leaders claimed the votes to pass it.

A test of strength yesterday indicated they were right. The Senate, by a 48-to-31 vote, defeated a move to send the bill back to conference

Files Conceal Lincoln's Own Picture of Self

World Forbidden to See His Papers, Letters for Nine More Years.

There is an Abraham Lincoln who stalks mournfully through 129 years of legend and history. There is another Lincoln who sits and gazes gravely from a marble temple not far from the broad white house where he lived a little more than four years.

There is still another Lincoln, wrapped in a trunk in the Library of Congress, not to be known, by man until nine years from now.

This last Lincoln is the man's own picture of himself. It is contained in his own letters and papers which were saved by his family after he died in a red brick house on Tenth street northwest. When these papers are brought to light in 1947 there may be given to biographers a new instrument to probe the depths of that soul which so often has been probed before.

The letters and papers, which may be the index to Lincoln, have been gathering dust since 1921. In that year they were deposited in the Library of Congress by Robert Todd Lincoln, his son. Young Lincoln stipulated in his letter of gift the documents must not be disturbed until 21 years after his death. He died in 1926.

No one knows why Robert Todd Lincoln made certain these papers would remain hidden so long.

2 Die, 3 Hurt In Auto Crash On Icy Road

D. C. Man Among Dead; Storm Brings Score of Accidents in City.

A man and a woman were killed instantly late yesterday when two automobiles collided in the snowstorm on slippery Lee boulevard, in the outskirts of Falls Church, Va. Three persons were injured critically in the crash which wrecked both automobiles.

The dead:

Mrs. Blanche Greene, 45, of Idlewood, Va.

Frederick M. Amberger, 50, of 4849 Potomac avenue northwest.

The injured:

Garner Greene, 45, of Idlewood, Va., fractures of his knee and nose and cuts, bruises and shock.

Mrs. Greene and Amberger were taken to Georgetown Hospital by the Clarendon Rescue squad. Garner Greene was taken to Georgetown Hospital in a private car. Stearn taken to Georgetown Hospital by Falls Church Policeman A. P. Shumate. Rosalee Harper, unconscious taken to Emergency Hospital in a private car.

Police could not learn the details of the crash. They said they understood Stearn and Amberger were in one of the cars, and the Greenes and their adopted daughter in the other. They blamed the ice-glazed highway for the tragedy.

Mrs. Greene and Amberger were pronounced dead on arrival at Georgetown Hospital.

$35,000 to Fight Lawlessness Asked by Criminal Law Group

Planning an organized war against organized crime, the Washington Criminal Justice Association yesterday announced that Wednesday it will open a campaign for $35,000 to fight lawlessness.

Clarence Phelps Dodge, general chairman of the campaign committee, stated yesterday that ten teams, of 12 persons each, will be organized into a "community sales group." He said several thousand dollars has already been given the association.

The comprehensive program to lessen crime in Washington, which was announced February 2, grew out of a series of open forums held at the Willard late in January by the Criminal Justice Association.

Among the proposals are studies of probation, of vagrancy laws "with a view toward eliminating panhandling," and of gambling laws with the possible sponsorship of "more rigorous" regulations. Fingerprinting of all criminals, more uniform sentences, study of the jury system and of the need for a District "habitual criminal" law are among the other points on the program.

Promotion of slum clearance, hospitalization of defectives in penal institutions, study of private ownership of firearms, study of the need for a District public defender, study of pawnbrokers and second-hand dealers were also announced as aims of the criminal justice group.

At the forum sessions two weeks ago, the urgency of Washington's crime problem was discussed by numerous speakers, including Attorney General Homer Cummings, Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan, Acting United States Attorney David A. Pine, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; Judge Edward M. Curran and Wilbur La Roe, chairman of the District Parole Board.

Congress vs. the State Department

"I don't know what our foreign policy is," complained Senator Johnson a few days ago, and Congress has been focusing its attention on the State Department ever since. Why this squabble between them? Franklyn Waltman looks into the matter in an article in Sunday's Post.

Wallace Asks Unified State Traffic Laws

'Chaotic' Rules Shown in Survey; Annual Toll Is 35,000.

By the United Press.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace last night said Federal control of traffic regulations could be avoided only if States adopted adequate and uniform laws to cut down the toll of motor vehicle deaths.

In a special report to Congress, based on a $75,000 survey made by the Bureau of Public Roads, Wallace deplored the "chaotic nonuniformity" of State laws which confuse motorists and contribute to accidents causing 35,000 deaths and more than 100,000 auto injuries yearly.

Offers 6-Point Plan.

Wallace said there was "urgent need" for the following six-point program to promote highway safety:

Enactment by all States of laws for licensing of motor vehicle operators, providing for stringent examination of all applicants.

Laws in all States to make the reporting of accidents mandatory.

Uniformity of the traffic regulations throughout each State.

Requirements for compulsory inspection of motor vehicles in every State.

Adoption by all States of uniform road rules governing the movement of traffic.

Most Dangerous Time.

The 114-page report showed that the most dangerous time to drive an automobile is between 7 and 9 p. m. on Saturdays and that young persons are more careless drivers than their elders.

A study of the driving habits of millions of American showed, Wallace said, that a "typical" accident usually involves a person 20 to 24 years old driving a borrowed automobile at an excessive speed and striking a child of 5 to 9 years crossing the street in the middle of a block.

He reported that drivers of borrowed cars were involved in more than 25 per cent of all accidents studied, whereas speed "higher than conditions warranted" was the most common cause of accidents.

The report showed that more pedestrians than motorists were killed in highway accidents and that the most "dangerous" ages for auto fatalities are between 5 and 9, between 45 and 49, and between 65 and 69. The report said nearly one-third of all persons killed in auto accidents were in those age groups.

Inexperience Is Rare.

Wallace reported that inexperience rarely was found to be the cause of accidents, and that 98 per

Grades Too Low, 84 Midshipmen Forced to Leave

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 11 (AP).—Eighty-four midshipmen packed their bags today and prepared to leave the Naval Academy because of failure to make the required scholastic grades during the first half of the academic year.

They include four seniors, two juniors, 37 sophomores and 41 freshmen. The academic board which reviewed their marks earlier in the week recommended they be dropped. Their resignations were accepted by Claude A. Swanson, Secretary of the Navy.

Naval Academy authorities said the midyear drop was "about the average." A total of 2,122 midshipmen, 620 second classmen, 531 youngsters and 527 plebes remain.

World War Hero's Son Badly Hurt in Ride Fall

London, Feb. 11 (AP).—Earle Beatty, eldest son of the British naval hero, was injured critically today when he was thrown from his horse while hunting in Leicestershire. His American-born wife, the former Mrs. Dorothy Power Sands of Virginia, hurried from London to a hospital at Leicester where Beatty underwent an operation.

Body of Kidnaped U. S. Priest Found

By the Associated Press.

The State Department yesterday announced that Father Gerard A. Donovan, Maryknoll missionary from Pittsburgh, Pa., had been found dead in Huijen, Hainan China. The priest was kidnaped by Chinese October 5 for ransom.

American Consul John Davies, jr., at Mukden, advised the department that Father Donovan's death had been reported officially by Mukden gendarmes.

U.S. Skipper Beaten Daily In Rebel Jail

American Captain Freed by Franco After 16 Days' Torture.

Shipmaster, Emaciated by Confinement, Thankful He's Alive.

By the Associated Press.

Gibraltar, Feb. 11.—Capt. J. E. Lewis, skipper of the American tanker Nantucket Chief, said tonight he was beaten with a rubber hose every day of the 16 days he and his crew were held prisoners by Spanish insurgents at Palma, Mallorca.

The Nantucket Chief arrived here today and prepared to sail for the United States.

"My body was a mass of bruises," Lewis said in an interview after making a full report of his experiences to the American consul.

In an emaciated condition after the ordeal, the skipper said:

"I am the happiest person in the world. I am lucky to have escaped a firing squad."

He said he had been told while in jail that he had been sentenced to 17 years and 4 months imprisonment "for trading with Spanish reds."

Lewis said he suspected a German member of his crew of giving the insurgents details of the Nantucket Chief's sailing plans. Most of the crew of 34 were Americans.

When captured, the tanker was bound from a Russian port with a cargo of oil for Barcelona. The skipper said the capture was made by three ships flying insurgent flags about 70 miles from Barcelona.

"The three ships turned their guns toward us ordering me to heave to," he asserted. "When this was done the crews of the other boats boarded the Nantucket.

"The first thing they did was to smash the wireless aerial. Then they arrested me and took control of the ship, taking her to Palma, at Palma we were forced to discharge the oil cargo."

Lewis said he was a native of Mathews, Va.

Swiss Reinforce Frontier; Rome Denies War Plan

Berne, Switzerland, Feb. 11 (U.P.).—The Swiss federal council today authorized military authorities to increase frontier guards with a company of volunteers, effective February 15.

Rome, Feb. 11 (U.P.).—The propaganda ministry today vigorously denied rumors that two or three divisions of Italian troops had been rushed to Brenner pass on the Austrian frontier as result of reports that trouble is brewing in Austria. The reports were described as "absolutely fantastic without the slightest foundation."

Wright Death Case Is Given to the Jury

Los Angeles, Feb. 11 (U.P.).—Superior Judge Ingall W. Bull late today entrusted to a jury of eight men and four women the fate of Paul A. Wright, who insisted he was "unconscious" when he killed his wife and John Kimmel, his best friend, in his home last November when he surprised them in a perverse embrace.

An hour later the jury sent for a number of exhibits, including photographs introduced in the trial and medical depositions with reference to a sterilization undergone by the defendant.

British Weigh Loan if Italy Will Quit Spain

Eden Reported to Favor $125,000,000 Plan; Opposed, May Resign.

By the United Press.

London, Feb. 11.—The British cabinet was reported tonight, without confirmation, to be considering a $125,000,000 loan to Italy as result of an agreement on the withdrawal of foreign "volunteers" from Spain and an approach to a new basis of Anglo-Italian friendship.

The projected loan, of which rumors have been heard for several weeks, was said to be contingent upon complete Italian adherence to the plan of giving the Spanish war "back to the Spaniards" and settlement of the matters in dispute between London and Rome since the Mediterranean crisis of 1935.

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, who worked out a method of Italian consent to the "volunteer" plan, was said by the Evening Standard to favor the loan but that he was opposed by several other members of the cabinet.

The Daily Mirror said Eden may resign because of dissension in the British cabinet over the policy toward Italy.

The Daily Express also said that dissension existed.

The Express said Prime Minister

Navy Chief Says Japan Plans No Fleet to Span Sea

Tokyo (Saturday), Feb. 12 (U.P.).—Japan has never considered building a navy capable of crossing an ocean to engage in conflict, Vice Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, vice minister of naval affairs, asserted today in an exclusive interview.

The interview indicated the general trend of Japan's replies to the notes of Great Britain, France and the United States, demanding that she reveal her naval building program.

"Japan will not engage in a building race," he declared. "Instead she will build what is necessary to defend her own shores and preserve peace and order in the Far East. The means will be found for such requirements."

Rumania Seeking to Patch Up Alliance With France, Britain

By the Associated Press.

Bucharest, Feb. 11.—The new Rumanian government headed by the patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox Church, Dr. Miron Cristea, began the delicate task today of regaining the friendship of France and Great Britain.

The cabinet, which replaced that of Fascist-inclined Octavian Goga, sought to reassure Rumania's traditional allies without offending Germany and Italy. The Goga government had veered toward the Rome-Berlin axis.

As the new government took form it became apparent that King Carol had concentrated much of its authority in the army.

The need for French financial support and aid in rearmament was obviously a factor in the new foreign policy.

It was believed also that King Carol hoped to create a better impression in England before visiting there within the next few weeks.

Dr. Cristea, meanwhile, tightened his military control over the country by a nation-wide state of siege. Government bonds and stock market prices rose.

Moderation of Goga's many anti-Semitic regulations was expected, but the premier's office said the question would wait until a minister of justice had been selected.

[The royal military dictatorship announced yesterday, according to the United Press, that it

World Developments.

A new declaration of United States naval policy, foreseeing a fleet to blanket both ocean coastlines and protect insular possessions, was proposed.

Great Britain was reported considering a $125,000,000 loan to Italy in return for Italian withdrawal from the Spanish civil war.

The new Rumanian government headed by the patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox Church, Dr. Miron Cristea, moved to regain the friendship of France and Great Britain.

Policy Stand Urged.

By Sidney Olson.

A new declaration of the naval policy of the United States, foreseeing a far-flung fleet of American warships that will blanket both ocean coastlines and protect insular possessions from Alaska to Samoa, was offered yesterday by Chairman Carl Vinson, (Democrat), of Georgia, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, as an amendment to the pending $800,000,000 naval building program.

Vinson's amendment, to be section 10 of the bill authorizing a 20 per cent fleet increase, came significantly amid continued pressure from peace groups and isolationists for a restatement of American foreign policy. Many Congressmen frankly regarded his amendment as stemming from the White House and held it to be the Administration reply to acid-tongued criticism of the Government's policies.

House Squabble Revealed.

In the continued tension, other developments were outstanding. One of these was the revelation of a week-long squabble in the House Military Affairs Committee over measures to prevent war-time profiteering — a committee struggle which forced the House leadership to postpone action on such a bill until next week, although originally scheduled for quick passage yesterday.

The committee already has re-

C. I. O. Insists That Senators Hear Bridges

Hearing Demanded 'in Justice' to Australian Labor Head.

By the United Press.

The Committee for Industrial Organization last night demanded that the Senate Commerce Committee grant to Australian-born Harry Bridges, its West Coast director opportunity to appear and defend himself against charges of Communism for which his deportation has been asked.

In a sharply-worded letter to Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, chairman, and other members of the committee, John Brophy executive C. I. O. director, declared that "the refusal to permit a man to be heard in defense of serious charges that are made against him in itself constitutes an issue of such importance that we do not see how any Senator in a democratic representative government can ignore its challenge."

Attacks Are Cited.

Copeland has refused Bridges' repeated requests for an opportunity to appear, asserting his committee, which is investigating conditions in the maritime industry, is not interested in "what an alien has to say."

"The matter is one of such simple justice and fundamental right that we are compelled to believe that the Senate joint commerce and labor committee will not allow Senator Copeland's decision to stand and will immediately offer Harry Bridges the right to be heard before the committee," Brophy said.

"Notwithstanding the fact that an investigation of the files of the Labor Department failed to support his charges, Senator Copeland continues to denounce Bridges in the most violent terms as an alien illegally in this country and unfit to be a union leader."

Hearing Soon Indicated.

The Department of Labor has indicated it will hold a hearing soon on the charges against Bridges and that the labor leader probably will be called to testify.

The C. I. O. demand came a few hours after Senator Joseph Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, proposed to the committee a measure designed to stabilize maritime labor conditions through arbitration and mediation of disputes. The bill closely parallels one proposed by Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, of the Maritime Commission, but differs sharply from the views of Labor Secretary Frances Perkins, who opposes arbitration.

Guffey, commeting on his "record of friendship for labor," urged maritime union leaders to study his proposal carefully. He said that if enacted it "would result, I honestly believe, in the accomplishment of all the legitimate aims and in the adjustment of all legitimate grievances that seamen now have."

Strike Is Recognized.

Main points of the bill are:

Binding and reciprocal duty upon employers and maritime labor to recognize the right of employes to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing without interference, influence or coercion on the part of the employer and requiring every employe to "scrupulously observe voluntary agreements with the employer made through representatives of his own choosing."

Require that employes' representatives be United States citizens.

Duty of employers and employes to exert every reasonable effort to make and maintain voluntary written agreements which must contain suitable provision for settlement of any dispute that may arise between the employer and employes.

Recognition of the right of employes to strike after they have exhausted all means of settlement of disputes provided in their agreements or in the act.

Create port committees to settle disputes. Create a mediation board by the Secretary of Labor to intervene in rival union disputes and disputes between employers and employes.

Create presidential board of mediation which could act when maritime commission believes a dispute threatens to interrupt interstate or foreign commerce.

Broaden authority of maritime commissions to prescribe minimum wage and manning scales and reasonable working conditions to include all American flag vessels. Abolition of hiring halls and provision for hiring through a shipping commissioner's office.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Copeland (Democrat), New York, yesterday said Joseph Curran, organizer for the Committee for Industrial Organization National Maritime Union, had asked a public hearing before the Senate Commerce Committee to refute charges made by Joseph Ryan, head of the American Federation of Labor International Longshoremen's Union. Ryan had asserted before the committee that Curran and officers of the C. I. O. unions were communists and radicals.

Copeland had sent Curran a transcript of Ryan's testimony with a statement that "no member of the committee believes you are" a communist.

Curran wrote that this point did not bother him, but he wished to answer statements about "radical activities of seamen" and "derogatory statements against myself and the National Maritime Union."

Copeland indicated the C. I. O. spokesman would be given an opportunity to answer the A. F. L. leader "some time later."

Labor Group Asks Veto of Picket Bill

Veto of the proposal to prohibit picketing and other activities within 500 feet of buildings occupied by embassies or consular offices was urged in a petition presented at the White House yesterday by Louis Colman, assistant secretary of the International Labor Defense.

The petition charged that when the resolution passed the House, none of a large number of members who had expressed opposition to it was present, and that it was called up unexpectedly. The proposal was called "a clear violation of the general policy of the United States Government in regard to the rights of free speech and assembly."

Newest Administration Strategy Brings Washington Into 'the Era of Do Nothing.'

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

Life generally may be one thing after another, but in Washington we are more specific. Here one era follows another—the economy era, the NRA era, the pump-priming era, the era of good will, the anti-monopoly era, the co-operation-with-business era.

Now we have a new era. For want of a better name it might be called the do-nothing or negative era. Nothing—or virtually nothing—is positive in official circles any longer. Congress does nothing but talk. Mr. Roosevelt does nothing—not even talk. His most frequent response to press-conference questions has become either the monosyllable "no" or the explanation "I don't know."

There has not been a first-class news story out of a White House press conference for more than two weeks. Previously there was at least one front-page piece in each press conference—either that all holding companies should be abolished, or they should not be, or that industry should sit around a table with Government, or that industry should maintain wages and reduce prices.

Aside, possibly, from a plan for Government assistance in providing industrial loans, there is nothing new on the White House horizon. Not a scheme or plan is in the melting pot. Mr. Roosevelt contemplates no fireside chats in the near future, and his message to Congress on the relationship of Government to business—which seemed so urgent and imminent at the beginning of January—remains unwritten and probably will not be written for several weeks.

Some ascribe the newly adopted negative atmosphere of the White House press conferences to the criticism directed at the President because of statements which allegedly confused and upset the business world, especially the first remarks about abolishing all holding companies.

Others attach more significance to this development. They view it as evidence of a new and unannounced Presidential "breathing spell" for business. Instead of being stung into silence by criticism, the President, it is thought, has decided to defer until some future time pronouncements of new policy and observations regarding business in order to encourage the latter to take hold of things.

But is not the present situation in Washington far more significant than that? Is it not indicative of a development more real and lasting than a mere "breathing spell?" The writer of this column thinks it is. He believes that it indicates in a tangible form that the New Deal, as we have known that term, has come to an end.

The term "New Deal" has generally been used as a synonym for the Roosevelt Administration. It has been generically used to describe all the activities of the Federal Government since March 4, 1933. The term is employed in a narrower and more specific manner here. It is used here to connote that experimentation in the field of social and economic problems which has been the distinguishing feature of the Roosevelt Administration and which has destroyed or impaired that confidence held to be so essential for sustained business activity.

It is used here in the sense given to the term by President Roosevelt at Baltimore in April, 1936, when he declared that the object of his Administration was "to do something" and added that "And when you have done that something, if it works, do it some more; and if it does not work, do something else."

Circumstances have made it impossible for Mr. Roosevelt to continue constantly to "do something else." In the first place, fewer unorthodox, untried schemes remain for experimentation. Most of them have been tried and found wanting. Secondly, Congress will no longer blindly permit Mr. Roosevelt and his brain trust to make a guinea pig out of the country. Thirdly, conflicting forces within the close Roosevelt advisory council have become so equally balanced as to nullify any positive course of action.

The last of these circumstances may be temporary. The left-wing experimentalists may regain their formerly dominant position and overwhelm the more cautious, conservative advisers. But the first two circumstances are likely to be permanent. Hereafter, I dare to predict, Mr. Roosevelt will have to convince Congress of the reasonableness of any proposals he hopes to make effective—and not only of the reasonableness but of the fact that such proposals have a chance to succeed by a rule of experience.

From that prediction the pending farm bill is excepted. That measure is certain to be enacted next week and it is not only in the category of "do something else" but it remains a general mystery. Farm legislation, like veterans' legislation, always is an exception to any general rule. Congress was experimenting with farm relief panaceas back in the days of Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover.

Aside from that exception, however, the proposition set up here seems sound by all standards. It is a proposition of which the business world surely should take cognizance. If sound it means that President Roosevelt has come to the end of his rope in harmful action from the viewpoint of business. It means the worst that can happen to business has happened and that from this time on any change will be for the better from a business viewpoint. Thus the smart business man should stop bellyaching about Mr. Roosevelt, adapt himself to prevailing conditions and undertake to do business, knowing that whatever changes come will be helpful and not harmful to him.

Senators Favor Inquiry on Profits

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Finance Committee yesterday approved a resolution by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, which would provide for an investigation of profit-sharing systems.

The resolution provides for a Senate committee to make "a report to the Senate upon all existing profit-sharing systems, between employers and employes now operative in the United States with a special view to the preparation of an authentic record of experience which may be consulted by employers who are interested in voluntarily establishing profit-sharing plans."

Storage Apples at Peak.

High Court Gets Water Pact Appeal

By the United Press.

The United States Supreme Court yesterday took under advisement a Colorado appeal from a State supreme court decision nullifying the Colorado-New Mexico water compact. Attorney General Byron G. Rogers, of Colorado, told the high tribunal that if the State court decision was allowed to stand it would "make it useless for States ever to make water compacts."

The arguments were heard after Chief Justice Hughes announced that the tribunal would defer ruling on whether it has jurisdiction and instructed attorneys to direct their pleas to the case's merits.

5,700 Tractor Workers To Vote Union Choice

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday announced elections would be held within 15 days among employes of the International Harvester Co.'s tractor workers at Chicago. The company employs about 5,700 workers.

G. O. P. Leaders To Ask Labor's Support Today

Use Lincoln's Birthday in Congressional Election Appeals.

By the United Press.

Republican party leaders will use the Nation-wide celebration of the birthday of Abraham Lincoln today as the vehicle for a new appeal for the support of labor in the coming Congressional elections, it was learned last night.

Fifty G. O. P. big-wigs, headed by National Committee Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, will address gatherings throughout the country. The general theme of their remarks, it was understood, will be that the party always has been a friend of the worker and that his liberty is threatened by the New Deal.

Youth will be asked to join with oldsters in a sweeping drive to unseat the New Deal. Politics will supersede economics as the burden of the addresses, but the Administration will be blamed for the recession which wrecked President Roosevelt's budget-balancing plans, party officials said.

Aiken in New York.

Two Republican liberals—Gov. George D. Aiken, of Vermont, and Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan—have key posts in the rally. Aiken, who recently demanded a purge of Southern Republican Committeemen, will be the principal guest of the National Republican Club of New York.

This platform is regarded as one of the most important in the party's sphere. Vandenberg occupied it in the 1936 Lincoln Day celebration, when he appeared a probable choice of the party for the Presidential race. Former Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, spoke there in 1937.

Vandenberg will speak at the Middlesex Club in Boston. The Michigan Senator has toyed with the thought of a coalition of conservative Democrats and Republicans to battle the New Deal at the polls in 1940, but he has not gone as far as Aiken in proposing that party lines be scrapped and that Administration foes unite in a common struggle.

Thought Is Divided.

Thought is sharply divided on coalition action against the New Deal. Former President Herbert Hoovtr doubts it could be made effective. One G. O. P. official recently sounded out a few anti-Administration Democrats following wide publication of suggestions that Republicans support Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana, who opposed President Roosevelt's Supreme Court enlargement bill and who has been abandoned by the Democratic State machine in his fight for renomination in the coming Indiana primary.

Van Nuys' Democratic associates in the fight on the court bill welcomed such co-operation, but they didn't offer to back Republican candidates in other States where Democrats are up for renomination and re-election this year.

Hamilton has kept hands off the controversy with the exception of making consistent appeals for co-operation from all political factions to scrap the New Deal. He is speaking today at Grand Rapids, Mich. On the same platform will be Senator H. Styles Bridges, New Hampshire, who shares Aiken's views on the need of "young and vigorous" leadership in the party, and Representative Carl Mapes, of Michigan.

Six 'Flying Forts' To Make Good-Will Hop to Argentina

By the Associated Press.

The War Department yesterday announced that six flying fortress giant bombers from Langley Field, Va., would comprise the flight of Army planes to Buenos Aires, Argentina, for the inauguration of Argentine President-elect Roberto M. Ortiz February 20.

Forty-nine officers and enlisted men will man the six planes under the command of Lieut. Colonel Robert Olds, of Woodside, Md.

The other five planes will be commanded by Maj. Vincent J. Meloy, Rosebank, Staten Island, N. Y.; Capt. Neil B. Harding, Beverly, W. Va.; Maj. Caleb V. Haynes, Mt. Airy, N. C.; Capt. Archibald Y. Smith, Middleburg, Va., and Maj. Harold L. George, Somerville, Mass.

Green Quits Union Led by C.I.O. Chief

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday resigned officially from John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers of America, which he joined 48 years ago in the southeastern Ohio coal fields. His resignation followed closely the announcement he made last Monday at the meeting of the executive council of the federation, in Miami, Fla.

A few hours after he had sent his resignation to his brother, Hugh Green, secretary of Local No. 379, U. M. W., at Coshocton, Ohio, Green assailed "certain self-constituted leaders of labor" for misrepresentation. He addressed the University of Wisconsin alumni dinner, in Chicago.

"Labor," he asserted, "recognizes that unless capital is allowed the opportunity to make reasonable profits, collective bargaining will be rendered useless and to no avail.

"Labor, no less than capital, demands that every sound endeavor which has economic ability be allowed to function and not be stifled or destroyed by Government fiat, whether given through a taxation, restrictive legislation or discrimination."

Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, gave the Senate a first-hand description of that great American phenomenon—the dust storm.

Arguing for passage of the farm legislation on the ground that it would be a step toward controlling the "dusters," Norris told of an auto trip he made in a dust storm a year ago.

"I never saw anything like it in my life," he declared. "It was just as impossible to see as though one were in a dark room with no lights. We could not see farther than the hood on our automobile. We had the lights turned on. We were on a paved road. Sitting on the side of the car nearest the edge of the road, I could look down and see the pavement and in that way guide the driver.

"We traveled at a snail's pace. We met several cars which were traveling in the same manner and we never saw them until they were right beside us on the pavement."

Publicity Spotlight Can Drive Fake Charities Out of District

This is the last of a series of articles exposing the charity racket operating in the District.

By Hedley W. Donovan.

It won't take a Tom Dewey to smash the District charity racket.

The local charity swindle, unlike other lines of racketeering in some cities, can claim no friends or allies among municipal authorities.

Minus gun play and intimidation, this racket thrives on human gullibility and sympathy for the suffering.

With full publicity for the activities, receipts and expenses of all charities operating in the District, the fake humanitarians would face a serious business recession.

Every citizen would have access to full information on any appeal to which he might be subjected. The misguided generosity which now is costing the city's needy at least $200,000 a year could be directed to the support of worthy causes.

Recommended by the Better Business Bureau, Council of Social Agencies and Board of Public Welfare, the simplest formula for putting the charity racket out of business appears to be a broadening of the commissioners' authority to include the licensing of all charitable institutions.

The Council of Social Agencies went on record more than three years ago in favor of an ordinance empowering the District government "to set up proper standards and regulations and to require suitable reports for the issuance of such permits, and to suspend, revise or revoke such permits."

The Better Business Bureau, according to Joseph W. Marshall, director, believes the civic authorities should exercise "regulatory control" over all charitable organizations and appeals.

Applicants for a permit should be required to provide specific information on the charitable activities they propose to undertake and then at stated intervals supply the proper authority with an audited financial statement, Marshall suggested.

Asks Central Agency.

"There ought to be some central governmental agency," Elwood Street, director of public welfare, advocates, "with police powers to insure uniform standards in money-raising and require issuance of financial statements."

The Board of Public Welfare would be qualified to render such a service in co-operation with a volunteer committee of responsible citizens, Street said.

No reputable charity, social workers agree, could object to such an ordinance. Many such agencies already give the widest possible publicity to their financial reports.

The well-intentioned organization whose overhead reaches unhealthy dimensions through inefficiency rather than racketeering also would gain by the proposed legislation.

Such a charity would receive expert criticism of its money-raising technique and administration of funds, pointing the way to greater service in its chosen field.

Volunteer solicitors might be required to carry a license certifying to their connection with the agency they represent. Solicitors working on a salary or commission basis would be granted licenses only after filing of sworn statements as to the exact amount of their compensation.

Laws Elsewhere.

Laws embodying many of these provisions have recently been enacted in St. Louis, Seattle, Tacoma and Columbus, Ohio. Legitimate agencies and contributing public report virtual disappearance of charity racketeering in these cities.

Until the District Government is empowered to break up the racket, citizens can protect themselves by the common-sense formula, "Investigate before you invest."

Requested to contribute to any charity whose activities are not already familiar to him, the individual should consult the Better Business Bureau, whose voluminous files hold full information on most of the rackets operating in Washington.

Other suggestions by the Better Business Bureau are:

The prominent citizen can co-operate by refusing to lend his name to any cause, as patron or member of the board of directors, until he is completely satisfied as to the merits of the appeal or organization.

District business men should refuse to give, or sell at cut prices, food or supplies to any organization without assurance the needy will be the actual beneficiaries.

Milk Code Draft Ordered After Unruly Hearing

Commissioners Decide on Committee After Furious Eight Hours.

Following eight hours of heckling, applause and tense feelings among milk producers and ice cream manufacturers at a hearing yesterday, the District Commissioners decided to appoint a committee to solve the dairy regulation problem.

From Wisconsin, described at the conference as "the finest milk producing State in the Union," came representatives to fight the nearby producers allegations of "supplying cream to District manufacturers for use in ice cream but find that some of the cream shows up on the tables of hotels and restaurants in fluid form."

The District was represented by the three Commissioners, Health Officer George C. Ruhland, Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal and Chief of the Food Inspection Division, Health Department, Dr. R. R. Ashworth.

Bootlegging Denied.

Brought together to discuss a set of proposed amendments which would place stricter regulations on cream brought into the District for use in the manufacture of ice cream, the conference produced allegations, denials, and accusations of various practices among the milk producers and manufacturers.

Julian Richards, general counsel for the Washington Restaurant Association, comprising 200 members, jumped to his feet at one point and requested "anyone here to prove that my clients are purchasing 'bootleg' cream."

The amendments proposed by the Health Department would require a health certificate of all persons, firms or corporations "which bring, or send, or cause to be brought or sent, into the District of Columbia, any milk or cream for the manufacture into ice cream."

Further, the amendments proposed "no milk or cream shall be imported into the District, for manufacture into ice cream . . . that contains more than 100,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter, nor shall it contain any neutralizer or other adulterant."

Differences Deplored.

It was brought out by a member of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association that certain cream and milk, "brought in from outside territories," were found to contain "salt, bicarbonate of soda and lime."

Another member of the association told the Commissioners that it was impossible to "continue to serve Washington with the best milk produced in the United States, as we have been producing in face of the outside milk, which is not regulated by the same strict health regulations."

"The District Health Department will bear me out," he stated, "that our milk is produced under the most stringent regulations. Why shouldn't the "outside milk" be subject to the same treatment."

As an alternative, this member suggested, "if you do not wish to regulate in this fashion then let the bars down for us, so that we can compete with them."

About the sixth hour of the conference, Commissioner Allen explained "that I am more befuddled about all this than when we began."

Other Changes Sought.

Paul E. Lesh, representing the sub-committee of ice cream manufacturers of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, presented to the Commissioners additional amendments which would permit the number of bacteria per cubic centimeter permissible in cream used in the manufacture of ice cream to be as high as 300,000.

Another of the proposals by Lesh supplemented a health department amendment calling for "all milk and cream manufactured into ice cream within 96 hours after its first pasteurization," by adding "unless it shall be homogenized and pasteurized in the course of manufacture into ice cream by a manufacturer holding a permit to receive milk and cream for manufacture into ice cream, in which latter event it shall be delivered in the District of Columbia to such manufacturer within 96 hours after its first pasteurization."

Alert Md. Police Stop 5 'Fugitives,' Find 3 Are G-Men

Baltimore, Feb. 11 (AP).—Federal agents don't carry signs, but they do carry guns—and this was at the bottom of a mixed identity case on the Baltimore-Washington boulevard, which landed three agents—and their prisoners—in the hands of police.

Henry F. Maas noticed one of the five men, in a car which stopped at his filling station, carried a gun. He notified police, who chased the big New York car for 3 miles.

State police stoped the car at the Laurel substation and ordered the occupants to come out with their hands in the air. Lined up in the station, one of the men got his hands down far enough to produce his Federal credentials. He was Joseph A. Petrini, of the Department of Justice, returning with two prisoners. The Maryland policemen apologized.

And not long afterward there came a call by police radio to look out for five men in a New York City automobile who were reported armed with a machine gun and wanted by police in Baltimore. Five minutes after the call was carried, Detective Sergt. L. M. Wilson and Private H. G. Thomas spotted the car at Fifth street and Rhode Island avenue northwest and captured it with drawn guns.

It turned out the five occupants were New York businessmen on their way to Florida for a vacation. They were released after questioning.

Injunction Granted to 209 Railroads, 3 Mine Firms, City of Cleveland.

Striking a sharp blow at the price-fixing policy of the National Bituminous Coal Commission, the United States Court of Appeals for the District yesterday granted 209 railroads, three coal companies and the city of Cleveland temporary injunctions restraining the imposition of minimum prices to be paid for soft coal.

The order, signed by Justice Harold M. Stephens, Justin Miller and Henry W. Edgerton, all of whom were appointed by President Roosevelt, held, in effect, that the schedule of price should have been made only after all interested parties were able to offer testimony.

Shortly after the decision became known, the commission considered suspending all minimum price schedules until a final court ruling, or until the temporary injunction is abated. No date was set for a final hearing.

Vast Expense Feared.

The carriers claimed the new schedule would cost them $20,000,000 a year, while the coal companies—the Saxton Coal Mining Co., the Enos Coal Mining Co. and the St. Louis & O'Fallon Coal Co., all of which sell a substantial proportion of their output to railroads—estimtaed their business would be ruined. The city of Cleveland estimated the cost to it would be $500 a day.

In granting the injunction, the Court of Appeals said it was without prejudice to a final ruling. It pointed out the coal act specifically provided that no "orders subject to review should be made without notice, a full hearing, and an issuance of a finding of facts."

The companies complain they were not consulted before establishment of the price list though they were interested parties. This, it was claimed, was a violation of the spirit of the act.

New York Firms Protest.

Meanwhile some 3,000 New York concerns comprising the Associated Industries of New York State, with investments of more than $4,000,000,000, appealed to the Court of Appeals to void the minimum price schedule fixed for the Empire State dealpers. The contention of the industries was that they had been deprived of due process of law because they had been denied an opportunity to be heard prior to the fixing of the prices.

The industries, consuming some 12,000,000 tons of coal a year, would have to expend about $5,500,000 additionally on coal bills if the minimum price schedule is adhered to, Wilbur LaRoe, jr., attorney for the New York State group, estimated.

In its opinion, the Court of Appeals stated, it appeared minimum price orders were issued and placed in effect "without notice of hearing, without affording a hearing to interested parties, and that if the orders are invalid they (the complainants) are suffering irreparable and continuing damages."

The suit, filed in the name of the Association of American Railroads, and the American Short Line Association, asked that they be permitted to examine the facts upon which the price schedule was fixed.

In its opinion, the Court of Appeals intimated the final fixing of the minimum price to be paid for bituminous coal should not have been fixed without giving "aggrieved" parties a chance to be heard. The rails and their associates were held to be such parties.

Penalty Tax Eased in Effort To End Committee Deadlock

House Handlers Yield to Let 'Family' Corporations Exempt Sums Set Aside for Debts, Give 90 Days' Grace in Dividends.

Modifications in surtax penalties on "closely-held" and family corporations were voted yesterday by Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee, but a committee deadlock still impended.

Concessions by leaders to critics of the penalty levy still left the Administration shy of the number of votes necessary for full committee approval.

Democratic committee members met apart from Republicans and cast a vote of 12 to 6 for the modified tax. But seven Republican members have yet to be heard from, and their opposition strength may bring a close vote of 13 to 12 against the tax.

The proposed penalty requires companies controlled by ten or less persons to pay a steep additional levy if they earn more than $50,0000 a year and pay out less than 60 per cent in dividends.

It is the most controversial single feature of the new 1938 revenue bill designed to temper the present tax on undistributed corporate earnings and to ease the existing capital gains and losses levy.

Two concessions were made yesterday by Representative Fred M. Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, reputed author of the so-called "third-basket" levy on companies in the closely held group.

They followed reported admissions by Treasury experts that nine out of ten of the companies affected by the penalty were not using the corporate device as a means of avoiding individual tax payments. Proponents of the tax had claimed they designed it to prevent tax avoidance.

New Alternative Added.

These concessions, agreed to yesterday by a majority of committee Democrats, would:

Permit closely held corporations to exempt from the 20 per cent surtax amounts set aside from net income to pay debts contracted before January 1, 1938, where the debt payments exceeded other exemptions.

Give the taxpayer the privilege of taking from 60 to 90 days to declare dividends to meet deficiency assessments by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

As the so-called "third basket" originally was proposed, closely held companies would first pay the 16 to 20 per cent income tax required of all corporations under the bill.

Then the additional penalty levy would apply on those in the limited group. A company would be permitted to deduct $40,000, or 30 per cent, whichever was larger, from their remaining income. They would pay a 20 per cent surtax on the balance.

As modified by yesterday's proposed debt allowance, the company would be permitted a deduction of $40,000, one of 30 per cent, or the amount used to pay debts or set aside for debt allowance, whichever was largest, members reported.

Long Carry-Over Sought.

The modifications were acceptable to Democratic opponents of the penalty, but they said changes did not go far enough. Specifically, some of the opponents seek permission for companies affected to carry over losses for two or three years as an offset against current earnings. But a majority of the Democrats opposed this. The bill now permits only a one-year carry-over of losses.

Although critics of the "third-basket" penalty seek two additional modifications, they admitted they had slight chance of winning them. They ask a reduction in the surtax from 20 to 10 per cent, and an allowance of exemptions for plant expansion.

Full committee defeat of the present modified provision would depend upon all six Democrats now opposing the penalty standing pat. Seven Republican opposition votes were regarded as certain. But one switch by a Democratic opponent would bring approval of the section in its present form. Recently, Democratic opponents have been under Administration pressure to support the provision.

Reformatory Riot Ends as 600 Felons Go Back to Cells

Concord, Mass., Feb. 11 (AP).—A disturbance by 600 inmates of the State reformatory, who refused to return to their cells from the institution yard, was put down quickly late today.

Superintendent Michael J. Dee talked the prisoners into ending their disturbance and marching to their cells quietly. Earlier he had summoned 20 State troopers when the recalcitrant convicts milled about the prison yard, hooting and yelling.

Arthur T. Lyman, commissioner of corrections, said the outbreak was staged to protest against a change in prison diet, the recent transfer of prisoners from the State prison in Boston to the reformatory, and a parole board ruling by which 280 inmates were given maximum sentences.

Thugs Take 2 Officials To Bank to Aid Robbery

Burnettsville, Ind., Feb. 11 (AP).—Three men seized John C. Duffy, 77, president of the Burnettsville State Bank, and his son, George, the cashier, at their separate homes early today, took them to the bank and attempted to blow the safe. Failing in that, they ransacked safety boxes and obtained $215.

The elder Duffy's wife, 75, also was forced to go along to the bank. After being held captive for about two hours, the three were returned to their homes by the robbers, who then fled.

Raiders Seize 2 Women In Unlicensed Rum Sale

Two colored women were arrested in a liquor raid in the 1200 block of Sixth-and-a-half street northwest yesterday, both charged with selling liquor without a license and keeping liquor for sale.

D. C. Justices Rest Too Long, Says Sen. King

To Favor Only One More; Stephens Asks Aid to Speed Litigation.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, insisted yesterday at a hearing before a sub-committee of the Senate Judiciary Committee that the justices in Washington's Federal Courts have an easy time with too long vacations.

Justice Harold M. Stephens (also from Utah), of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, argued that the vacation periods are not all rest as justices often study evidence and write opinions while the court is in recess.

The Federal courts are in recess three months during the summer, two weeks at Christmas, and two weeks at Easter. The sub-committee is holding hearings to determine whether additional justices should be added to the Court of Appeals and the United States District Court of this and other jurisdictions.

Senator King disclosed that he is making an investigation of the number of days and hours the justices sit on the bench, the status of the court's docket, and related matters.

After the hearing he said he would not favor more than one additional justice for the United States District Court and none for the Court of Appeals. The pending bill would give the District Court three justices and the appellate court one more.

King's criticism of the court was not directed at Justice Stephens, however, as the latter is a protege of the Senator.

Justice Stephens said the heavy work and long hours of the appellate court during sessions make the long summer rest period an economy.

He explained, however, that his recommendation for an additional justice for the Court of Appeals was based on the desire to speed up cases for litigants rather than to relieve the present justices of any labor.

LaPorte Is Held In Bond Default

Baltimore, Feb. 11 (AP).—Sammy LaPorte, bantamweight pugilist, who quit a fight here January 17, was held in jail today in default of $3,000 bond.

Three men presented jointly with him by the grand jury, Benjamin Fisher, Samuel Weiner, and Benjamin Schwartz, posted bonds and were released.

D. C. Income Tax Can't Pass House, Rep. Wood Admits

Although still a supporter of the proposed District income tax, Representative Wood (Democrat), of Missouri, yesterday admitted that it has no chance to pass the House at this time.

Wood, who voted with Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, to place the levy in the District revenue bill, said that his conversation with House members had convinced him they will not vote to tax their own salaries.

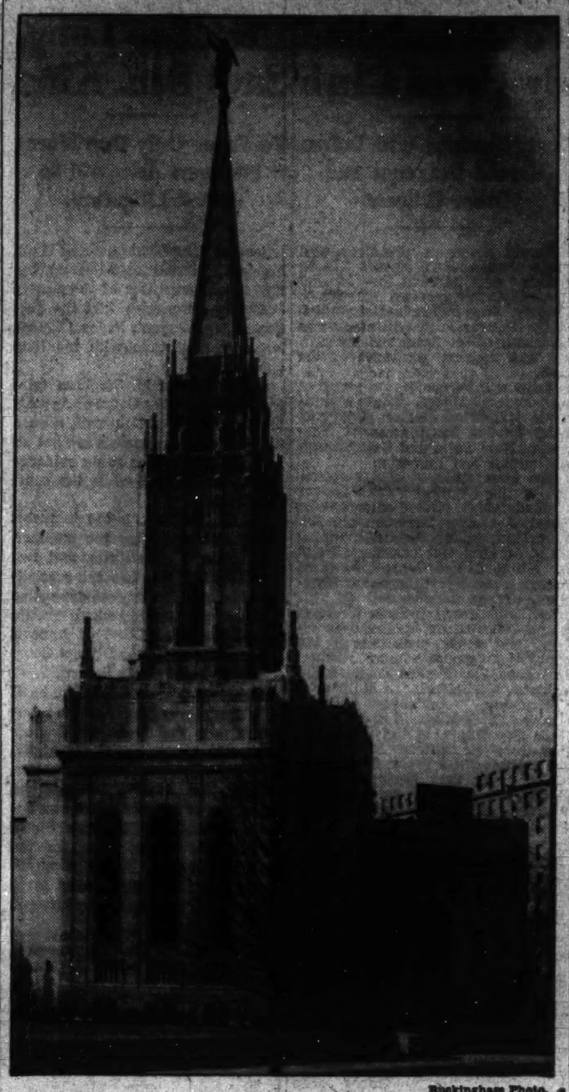
Historic Churches



Washington Chapel, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Church of Latter Day Saints Is Unique in Its Architecture

Unique architecturally among Washington churches is the Washington Chapel of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints, commonly known as the Mormon church, located at Sixteenth street and Columbia road northwest.

The chapel was built as a national monument to the Church of the Latter Day Saints, headquarters of which are in Salt Lake City, Utah marble was chosen as the construction material. Each of the 16,404 stones was quarried and milled in the Rocky Mountains and numbered for its position in the building before being shipped East.

So exact were measurements that only one stone failed to fit. The building was completed in 1933 at a cost of about half a million dollars.

The tower, which rises 160 feet above the street, is patterned after a spire in the Salt Lake Temple, and like its original, is capped by a 10-foot figure of the Angel Moroni, finished in 23-carat gold. The statue was cast in aluminum and weighs 645 pounds. The architectural design of the chapel has been called a modern adaptation of American Colonial.

A glass mosaic depicting the Sermon on the Mount decorates the entrance portal. The air-conditioned chapel is arranged in the form of an amphitheater with a high rostrum at the east side. Mormon symbols appear on the high windows. The central windows depict maps of North and South America and Europe, and scenes from modern church history decorate six smaller windows.

In addition to the Sunday evening public services, the church holds organ recitals Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 8 p. m. D. Sterling Wheelwright, chapel director, is the organist. More than 50,000 have attended the concerts in the last four years.

Like the mother church, the Washington chapel stresses secular activities. A recreation hall with stage and projection room adjoins the chapel. On the lower floor are classrooms and a banquet hall, complete with modern kitchen. Gymnasium, showers and locker rooms are in the basement.

Samuel R. Carpenter, assistant secretary of the Federal Reserve Board, at present heads the congregation of 1,500. His predecessor was Dr. Edgar Brossard, federal tariff commissioner. Associated with Mr. Carpenter are Abram Cannon and LaMar Webb.

Christian Science Subject Is 'Soul'

"Soul" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Psalms 35:9: "My soul shall be joyful in the Lord: it shall rejoice in his salvation."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And the Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones: and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not" (Isaiah 58:11).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Soul is the substance, Life, and intelligence of man, which is individualized, but not in matter. Soul can never reflect anything inferior to Spirit."

St. Margaret's Show.

Frank Portillo, Washington's popular clown, will be the main attraction this afternoon and evening at the benefit show given by St. Margaret's Church Young People's Fellowship, at Connecticut avenue and Bancroft place northwest. The entertainment will also feature Clarence Jackson, magician and "shadowgraphist," Punch and Judy, and other variety acts.

Rev. Mr. Coyle Advises Care In Use of Brand of 'Hypocrite'

Sherwood Presbyterian Pastor Points Out That Niemoeller, Now Held a Martyr, Might Have Been Target of Charge.

By the Rev. Thomas Law Coyle,
Pastor, Sherwood Presbyterian Church.

"There goes a contemptible hypocrite!" How often you or I have heard the term "hypocrite" flung with a sneer at some man or woman. Hypocrisy which is play-acting, using religion as a cloak, is one of the most disagreeable of all sins. For this very reason temperance in the use of the term "hypocrite" is a virtue much to be desired.

Here is the man who loses his temper. We fling the epithet "hypocrite" at him because tomorrow he enters the church. By entering the church he proclaims his need of forgiveness and his seeking after God. Are we sure that his action is play-acting, using religion as a cloak to hide his rascality? Perhaps he inherited a fierce temper and is making progress in its control. Is it fair to drive him away from the house of God by throwing the term "hypocrite" at him?

With shallow lunacy it would have been easy five years ago to have shouted "hypocrite" at Martin Niemoller, of Berlin. Why? Because he had been a U-boat commander, who exulted in his work and now was preaching the Prince of Peace. Now we, as Dorothy Thompson testified the other night, know that Martin Niemoller was no hypocrite. We see him willing to give his life for his faith. He is willing to defy Hitler to the end. He is obeying God rather than man. What liars we would have been had we given shallow judgment five years ago. Is it not possible that similar unfair judgments of hypocrisy are being made of other men today?

One of Lincoln's favorite texts was: "Judge not that ye be not judged." If we see a man commit murder we cannot help deciding that he is a murderer. But judgment of motive is another thing. When we say a man is a hypocrite we are dangerously close to blasphemy. We are claiming to read the motives of his heart. We are almost placing ourselves in the place of Christ or of God.

Call a man a scoundrel or a rascal if you must. But unless you are the perfect and final psychiatrist capable of reading the mysteries of man's mind let us never call anyone hypocrite. "Judge not that ye be not judged." The apostles were chary of calling men hypocrites. Have we the right to overstep? Let us celebrate a birthday or better yet our faith by dropping the word "hypocrite" from our vocabulary.

Dr. J. W. Rustin Preaches Twice At Mt. Vernon

Judge Eugene Black to Address Adult Division in Morning.

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of the Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South, will preach twice tomorrow. His morning subject will be "An Adequate Philosophy of Life," and in the evening he will preach on the topic, "To Those Who Doubt." Deane Shure will direct the choir of 70 voices in anthems at each service, singing a spiritual at the evening service, "Angels at My Feet," by Burleigh.

All departments of the church school will meet at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow. Judge Eugene Black, chairman of the United States Board of Tax Appeals, will address the adult division. The Imperial Male Quartet will sing.

Calvary. The pastor, the Rev. W. D. Keene, will preach at the 11 a. m. service on "These Challenging Times." At 8 p. m. the pastor continues his series of sermons on Old Testament characters. He will speak on "Moses, Great National Leader."

Francis Asbury. The Rev. Albert P. Shirkey, pastor, will begin a series of sermons Sunday morning on the questions asked by Jesus, and in the evening on the questions asked of Jesus. His morning subject will be "Why Are Ye Fearful?" At the 8 p. m. service his subject will be "Comest Thou to Me?" There will be six questions in each series.

Emory. Boy Scouts of the Troop No. 76 will be the special guests at the morning service. The vested junior choir of 40 voices will furnish the music for this anniversary occasion.

The Rev. Horace E. Cromer will preach at both services. For the morning service, "The Search for Certainties" is his subject. At the evening hour he will present the picture interpretation of "The Inside of the Cup," by Winston Churchill.

G.O.P. in House Committee to Fight Relief Bill

Sub-Group Almost Equally Divided but Eventual Passage Is Expected.

Republican criticism of President Roosevelt's request for an additional $250,000,000 to meet the relief crisis last night foreshadowed a bitter House sub-committee fight over the proposal, although eventual approval seemed assured.

Aligned with Republican members of the House appropriations deficiency sub-committee was Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, consistent foe of large relief spending, and it appeared that with the sub-committee almost evenly divided approval might be by a narrow margin. It was believed, however, that once favorably reported to the full committee the request would receive speedy support.

Hearings Begun.

Representative John Taber (Republican), New York, ranking minority member of the sub-committee, said the full committee might not act on the measure until late next week, although Chairman Edward T. Taylor (Democrat), Colorado, expects a report by mid-week.

The sub-committee began hearings yesterday. The first witness was Acting Progress Administrator Aubrey Williams, who warned that failure to approve the request would mean 450,000 persons would have to be dropped from WPA relief rolls when relief spending reaches its peak next month.

He pointed out that approval of the request would mean that 500,000 could be added to WPA rolls immediately after passage.

Taber criticized Williams' testimony and said that "so far we've heard nothing to justify the appropriation" and that he could not "support it on this evidence."

Williams estimated WPA rolls would soar to 2,500,000 in March, compared with the peak load of 3,000,000 which established the record two years ago. He said the additional money would afford nearly 800,000 more jobs on the average through June, when the current fiscal year ends, than the WPA could provide otherwise.

In March, he testified, the number would be 850,000, and in April 900,000 greater. WPA rolls then will begin to taper off with seasonal rises in private employment.

Mr. Roosevelt asked the additional funds to augment the current appropriation of $1,500,000,000 and put 1,000,000 additional men to work. In a special message Thursday he said 3,000,000 were made jobless during the last 90 days.

Williams' testimony coincided with an American Federation of Labor estimate that 829,000 workers lost their jobs in industry and agriculture between November 15 and December 15, 1937, making a total of 9,355,000 unemployed during December.

The survey predicted that unemployment figures would be even greater for January. The Government is providing approximately one job for every four persons laid off, based on WPA roles, the survey said. The appropriation sought by the President would make the total available for relief during the 1937-1938 fiscal year $2,009,000,000 and increase the prospective estimated deficit to $1,338,000,000.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., will appear before the committee next week and will be questioned regarding how the Government proposes to raise the money, inasmuch as no new taxes are planned.

Indiana Captures 3 of 5 in Break

Michigan City, Ind., Feb. 11 (AP).—Three of five long-term convicts who sawed and cut their way from the Indiana State Prison here last night, were back inside the prison walls tonight.

Posses captured the three fugitives early today. One of them, George Christian, 26, battled a deputy sheriff and a State policeman who caught him in a stolen car, 30 miles southwest of Michigan City, and was beaten severely.

Wallace Urges Uniform State Traffic Codes

cent of drivers involved in traffic mishaps had more than a year's driving experience.

He insisted that no conclusions could be reached as to which sex makes the safer driver. Women were shown to be involved in but 6 per cent of all accidents. In proportion to the number of drivers of each sex, men drivers struck pedestrians and railroad trains with greater frequency. Women's accidents involved striking other automobiles and fixed objects, the survey said.

Accidents on Saturday occur with twice as much frequency as on Tuesday, which proved to be the safest driving day of the week. So-called "Sunday drivers" were involved in 17 per cent of all accidents, compared with 20 per cent on Saturdays.

Wallace's report criticized lax enforcement of motor vehicle laws and asserted that only 13 per cent of drivers involved in accidents fatal to others were punished—10 per cent were fined, and 3 per cent were jailed.

Jackson's Wish To Pick Courts Angers Austin

Protest Follows Approval of Practice Used in U. S. Trials.

By the Associated Press.

Robert H. Jackson, President Roosevelt's nominee for the post of solicitor general, asserted his thorough-going approval yesterday of the Justice Department's practice of selecting friendly courts for the trial of its big cases.

He did so to the indignation of Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont, who said he considered such procedure "outrageous." The idea that a Vermonter could be tried in Texas is "abhorrent," he said, because a man is entitled by centuries of precedent to trial by a jury of his neighbors.

Jackson, whose qualifications for the office of solicitor general were under investigation by a Senate judiciary sub-committee, said he "would always pick a favorable judge" and court if he "could find one."

Norris Agrees.

"Of course," Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, interjected, "everyone would."

Jackson, who at present is Assistant Attorney General, explained that "certain judges" were friendly in anti-trust cases and others favorably disposed when the Government brings tax suits. The department's practice, he said, is to choose, upon this basis, among the various jurisdictions in which a suit can be instituted.

"Somebody's got to pick the court" he said. "I wouldn't let the defendants do it."

He nodded approvingly after Norris said that when individuals and corporations filed suits or sought injunctions they, too, selected the most favorable court they could find.

Ickes' Letter Read.

The discussion arose when Austin questioned Jackson about the recent antitrust trial of oil companies and officials in Madison, Wis. A letter once written by Secretary of the Interior Ickes was introduced by Austin in an effort to show that the oil companies and their officials were convicted for the use of practices which not only were permitted, but encouraged, under NRA.

Jackson readily conceded there was a "fundamental" conflict between the principles of NRA and those of the antitrust laws. He insisted, however, that in the oil case the Government "did not prosecute for things done under NRA or for things done with Government approval."

Loan From Britain If Duce Quits Spain

London

Neville Chamberlain is anxious to come to terms with Premier Mussolini immediately regarding the Mediterranean.

It added that Eden, however, was urging a "go slow" policy.

According to the Mirror, Eden advised the government to wait until Italian troops have been withdrawn from Spain.

Since the foreign minister was opposed by other members of the cabinet, he "may feel compelled to resign," the paper said.

Duce's Reply Expected Soon.

It was understood the Italian ambassador, Dino Grandi, and Eden reached an agreement whereby the 40,000 Italian legionnaires fighting in the Spanish insurgent armies will be evacuated, providing an acceptable system of control can be established to make certain that no further foreign aid reaches the loyalist forces.

The plan has been submitted to Premier Mussolini and his decision is expected to be sent to London early next week, permitting an early session of the chairman's group of the international non-intervention committee, probably Tuesday.

Crash in Snow Kills D. C. Man, One Other, Hurts 3 Virginians

since before noon, caused at least a score of automobile accidents in the District yesterday. Many Washingtonians were in hospitals, some of them in serious condition, and others for cuts and bruises suffered when skidding cars became involved in traffic mishaps.

Letitia Neal, 64, of Rockville, Md., was critically injured when she was struck last night at Eleventh street and Massachusetts avenue northwest by an automobile police said was operated by George W. Howlin, 26, of 330 E street northeast. She was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a fractured skull and a fractured leg, while Howlin was arrested on a charge of reckless driving.

Taxi Overturns.

A taxi cab driven by Luther Carter, 22, of the 1400 block of Potomac avenue southeast, was overturned when it collided with an automobile driven by Abe Ritzenberg, 28, of 1247 Holbrook terrace northeast at Fourth and Bryant streets northwest. Mrs. Lena Anderson, 42, a passenger in the cab, suffered a fractured skull, and was reported in serious condition at Freedman's Hospital.

Mrs. Myrtle Hurst, 31, of Vienna, Va., was in serious condition at Georgetown Hospital, where she was taken after she was injured in an automobile accident near her home.

Police cautioned drivers to be especially careful, as the snow, turning to icy rain late in the day, made the streets and highways doubly hazardous.

The Weather Bureau predicted snow or rain for this morning, and rising temperatur later in the day. Official measurement of the snowfall, which was general in Maryland and nearby Virginia, was about an inch at 4:30 p. m. Yesterday's high of 32 degrees was recorded at 11:30 a. m., while a low of 27, was recorded half an hour later.

Snow to Vanish Today.

Rising temperatures today will melt all vestiges of the snow, the forecaster said.

Lincoln

the 129th birthday of Abraham Lincoln, an aged researcher roused himself from his aging books at the library. He explained the papers are hidden from public and students alike.

"They think the papers are stored away in a trunk," he said . . . "They say the true Lincoln never will appear in full stature until 1947 when the trunk is opened and researchers can take the long threads of narrative that begin in the rich Sangamon County ground and reach to the White House . . . All manner of sheerest fiction is appearing, week by week . . .

Files Have Been Seen.

"I come here often to study the things that were Lincoln's and his likeness as these pictures have it . . . And I hear them talking in the museum here; they say they know the contents of the trunk and that an even newer Lincoln will arise, as by some magic, when the lid is lifted . . . But I'm not interested in the trunk; it seems better to look at that window, just to the left of here . . . There was a door here in 1865, and a theater box, just where you see that railing . . .

"It is a bitter picture to see; but it holds me . . . For there was an alley just behind the door, a dark alley on that night . . . It holds you when you look at the window now, the man on horseback who slunk in, gave the bridle to a boy and entered the theater to assassinate the President . . ."

More inclined to the present realities was the Congressional librarian. First off, he smashed the idea of the trunk. Nobody will ever lift a lid for a newer Lincoln to arise from, because there isn't any trunk. There are, instead, a set of voluminous files, secret, not even to be photographed—but these have been seen and by no less astute researchers than Nicholay and Hay.

Perspective Robert's Object.

These historians were shown the papers by Robert Lincoln before his death. But since his death they have been sealed, to remain so until 1947. Why "1947" also has been the subject of dispute and speculation. The librarian said there is only one plausible answer: In the letter of gift Robert Lincoln himself gave no explanation; but it is clear, said the librarian, that he wished the papers to remain obscure, even unknown, until the years have created more perspective to work from on the subject of Lincoln.

He wanted time to ease out the kinks in all the many viewpoints. And the conclusion that a new Lincoln will spring from the documents' folds is not necessarily held by the librarian. Both Nicolay and Hay has access to the file or the papers that compose the file—and they have made no secret of what they read, it was pointed out.

The fame of Lincoln grows on the record books of the Tenth Street Museum, the custodian said. He showed his books, indicating that 135,000 persons visited the shrine in 1937; that there has been a consistent increase of 15 per cent in the number of visitors since the museum was opened February 12, 1932. Likewise, the number of visitors to the red brick house across the street—the house in which Lincoln died—increases each year. In the museum, students or the person only casually interested in Washington's historic places may view 1,500 exhibits, ranging from rare photographs and portraits of the President to his autographed papers and a long hickory rail he chopped.

And the point is, says the custodian, the museum is popular the year 'round. They don't just come in when Lincoln is fresh in people's minds, like on February 12 and for a few days thereafter, when they're still remembering him. They come all the year 'round.

With members of Congress, high governmental officials and leaders of the American Legion attending the Sergt. Jasper Post, No. 13, American Legion, will honor its retiring commander, Frederick F. Money, with a testimonial dinner tonight at the New Colonial Hotel.

Guests invited include Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs; Representative Lawrence E. Imhoff, of Ohio; Joseph F. Healey, secretary to Representative Duncan, of Missouri; Ferdinand G. Fraser, national chef de gare of the Forty and Eight; Capt. Installation of the officers will be held late this month.

Attacks Delay Vote on Farm Crop Control

Farm

for new dairy farm concessions, after Vice President Garner overruled a point of order against conference changes in the bill.

The vote came on an appeal to the Senate from Garner's ruling, which brought a bitter protest from Senate Minority Leader McNary.

"I had hoped," said McNary, "the occupant of the chair had an open mind on this matter."

The Republican leader said the Vice President's ruling set up a third House of Congress by conceding Congressional conference committees the power to legislate.

Modify Amendment.

Conferees had modified the Bolleau-McNary dairy amendment, which originally denied benefit payments to farmers who raised cattle or other livestock and produce for market on acres diverted from major crops.

The modified amendment, narrowed to cattle only and permitting "normal" increases in herds, drew the concentrated fire of dairy interests, who seek protection from new Southern competition.

Although dairy bloc Senators were complaining of a specific provision affecting their sections, Vandenberg and two Democratic conservatives—Bailey and Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York—broadened the attack into a denunciation of the entire crop control program. Copeland called the theory "fallacious." Vandenberg called it a "system of delegated tyranny" and "the most gigantic regimentation this side of Russia."

Continues Benefits.

The bill continues soil conservation benefits but adds machinery for control of the five major crops—cotton, wheat, corn, tobacco and rice. On approval of farmers, penalty-enforced marketing quotas could be imposed whenever production passed surplus points. "Parity" payments would be made to farmers when and if funds were available, and an experimental Federal crop insurance program would be inaugurated on wheat in 1939.

Bailey said the bill provided for the "exercise of unlimited and arbitrary power over the people" and says in effect to the farmers: "You shall not plant until you get the permission of the Secretary of Agriculture."

"We are saying to this man, 'You have land that you shall not plant;' to that man, 'You have land and you shall plant three acres,' and to another man, 'You have land and you shall plant ten acres,'" said Bailey.

"You are doing something that the Supreme Court has already said you could not do."

He cited Supreme Court invalidation of the agriculture adjustment act, less sweeping in its provisions than the pending bill. He declared President Roosevelt himself, in a speech March 7, 1930, opposed principles now incorporated in the bill.

It's UnAmerican.

"The commerce clause of the Constitution never authorized the control of the farms of this country by the control of the farmers," said the North Carolinian.

"Of course it is unAmerican. Of course it is unconstitutional. And of course, no matter what is said by way of the condition of the farmer, it is intolerable."

Western dairy State Senators, including Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Lewis B. Schwellenbach, of Washington, assailed changes in the dairy section by conferees.

Urging the need for immediate action to make the bill effective on this year's crops, Majority Leader Barkley, Chairman Ellison D. Smith, of the Agriculture Committee, and Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, rose to defend the measure.

Norris criticized dairy bloc members for their opposition stand, and called upon Senators to support the bill "even though you doubt it may work, or object to some parts of it."

"Personally, I believe much good can come from this legislation," said Norris. "It may bring a ballance to agriculture."

How To Make It Work.

With the establishment of the National Mortgage Association of Washington, the financial mechanism essential for the new private housing program is complete. Capital should now be available on reasonable terms for all types of housing, whether for rental or sale. Some very serious gaps in the country's mortgage financing machinery have been closed.

Numerous institutions are equipped to lend money on individual homes or small apartments. In many instances, however, large-scale projects have been discouraged by the want of any adequate source of capital. That has been a serious handicap to the Federal Housing Administration. But with a model mortgage association, financed by the RFC and now authorized to lend large sums on FHA-approved projects, it is reasonable to expect a substantial increase in this type of residential construction.

Funds should be more readily available, too, for the construction of individual homes. For in addition to financing large-scale developments, the association has authority to buy and sell FHA-insured mortgages, thus giving greater liquidity to holdings of this type. Experts who have given years of study to the problem believe that our mortgage machinery is now entirely adequate to sustain a substantial building program and to encourage the development of a more economical and responsible building industry.

The FHA's new regulations, based on the 1938 housing act, are going out to field offices throughout the country. Soon they will have been explained to financial institutions, builders, labor groups and the public interested in the acquisition of new dwellings. Some may suppose that the program will end there. Actually these steps may prove to be important chiefly as a means of clearing the way for co-operative action on the part of builders and labor groups.

In sending the housing bill to Congress last November the President said:

> The success of such a program as this, however, can not be assured by Governmental action alone. It will depend mainly on the willingness of industry and labor to co-operate in producing housing at costs that are within the reach of the mass of our people.

Congress has merely provided the machinery for a housing program. It remains for private industry and labor to make that machinery work.

But the Government is ready to offer every practical assistance in this difficult task. Mr. Roosevelt announced in his housing message that conferences with representatives of industry, labor and finance would be held "with the view of giving housing construction a fresh start." Presumably those discussions will take place as soon as these groups have had an opportunity to become familiar with the provisions of the new act.

Out Of Alignment.

One of the curious anomalies in the Nazi attitude regarding Germans abroad has been the silence hitherto observed on the subject of the large German-speaking minority of South Tyrol.

Under Italian rule, since the end of the World War, this minority has been about as badly treated as any to be found in Europe. So drastic has been the Italianization process that even the names on tombstones have been changed to destroy evidence that the region has for centuries been occupied by a Teutonic people. On the other hand the Nazi press has been full of lamentations and fulminations regarding relatively trivial discrimination against the Sudeten Germans of Czechoslovakia.

But the conspiracy of silence on the subject of the Tyrolese was no accident. It followed inevitably from the establishment of the Berlin-Rome axis. The Hitler government did not wish to criticize its friend and ally for the unpleasant state of affairs just below the Brenner Pass. Thus the standard applied by Germany to Czechoslovakia was never applied to Italy.

But in Munich this week, the Association for Germanism Abroad issued a poster attacking the Italian government for the "persecution of the German minority in South Tyrol" and urging Germans to join in the struggle against this persecution. And nothing of that sort happens in the Third Reich without the government's consent.

The mere emergence of the issue indicates that the Berlin-Rome axis is beginning to creak under the strain of old antagonisms which neither banquet speeches nor official censorship have succeeded in eliminating.

The Critics Are Confused.

A great deal of nonsense is being currently talked regarding "definition" or "clear declaration" of American foreign policy. More to the point would be a clarification of what the critics have in mind in making loose and intangible charges against the Administration's course in this field. For at present such clarification is notably lacking.

Senator Hiram Johnson defines as "irresponsible" the use which President Roosevelt made of the word "quarantine" in his Chicago speech four months ago. As a Senator, and a member of the important Foreign Relations Committee, Mr. Johnson is of course entitled to make such charges as seem to him reasonable. But to take a single word of a speech out of its context and say that this alone "set in motion all the inquiries which have since been made" is scarcely to establish a model of responsible utterance.

In his speech of October 5, Mr. Roosevelt posed an issue which cannot be evaded by pretending that it does not exist. The heart of that speech was the assertion that it is "a matter of vital interest and concern to the people of the United States that the sanctity of international treaties and the maintenance of international morality be restored." Words have taken on a strangely distorted meaning if that simple and irrefutable statement, when voiced by the man whose constitutional duty it is to direct our foreign policy, can be regarded as "irresponsible."

It is no mere accident that recent extravagant charges have been aroused by the pending naval expansion bill. For that legislation is a direct result of an attitude of isolation which makes it imperative that the United States should be able to defend itself, perhaps also Latin America, against a potential combination of aggressors. On this point Senator Johnson is thoroughly consistent. He favors the proposed building program, but is opposed to the Navy "being used in connection with any other country on earth."

Other critics of the President are equally opposed to any form of co-operation with other powers, but are strongly hostile to Mr. Johnson's big-navy stand. They seem to believe that the United States lives in a world of its own and can properly shut its eyes to the doings of outside barbarians. It is an attitude the Chinese used to have.

There is thus a confusion and internal opposition in the condemnation of the Administration's foreign policy which justifies the demand that critics clarify their own thinking before demanding further definition from others. There is nothing mysterious, on the contrary there is the utmost prudence and caution, in the way our foreign policy is being handled under the skillful direction of Secretary Hull. Indeed that much-tried statesman has every right to lose his habitual patience at the constant pinpricks from those who are themselves befuddled.

Foreign policy, moreover, cannot possibly be laid down in advance with the clarity and certainty which, theoretically, is possible in the handling of domestic problems. Our relations with other nations are necessarily governed by their relations with us, over the trend of which we have at best only partial control. At any time, and particularly at a period as confused as the present, a "clear declaration of the foreign policy of the United States" might easily defeat the end sought. The more precise the enunciation of policy, the more inevitable a change in its direction might prove to be.

In his Chicago speech, now under fire, the President made a definite declaration of policy to the implications of which the Administration has ever since adhered with scrupulous fidelity. "We are determined to keep out of war," he said, "yet we cannot insure ourselves against the disastrous effects of war and the danger of involvement."

On the ground of clarity, and unquestionable truth, it is impossible to see how this declaration could be improved upon. And critics have yet to name a single action, taken since last October in the field of foreign policy, which is not completely in accord with that public definition.

This Fleeting Life.

Life being but a breath, it is natural that man should wish to take a long one. Interest therefore attaches to any suggested way of extending the breathing period. And the earnest student of life and living may with little trouble hear something new on the subject every day from prophets, statisticians, mystics, dietitians, scientists and insurance agents.

Once in a while a man who'd like to live forever gets a thrill. Such was the case when Dr. William Moulton Marston, psychologist, recently voiced the conviction that a thousand years from now man will begin to live a thousand years, instead of his present beggarly three score and ten. But ordinarily the seekers for longevity have more modest ambitions. And for them are reported the conclusions of Drs. Banta, Ingle and Dunham, of Brown University, after five years' study in collaboration with Prof. Daphnia Longispina, the justly celebrated water flea.

The average life of a water flea is 29 days. But the doctors discovered that if given a limited food supply while she is young and a generous food supply when she has reached maturity Daphnia will live from 42 to 51 days.

If the same rule exists for human beings, and the doctors hint at the possibility, then men may almost double the length of their present span of life simply by living frugally while young and eating ad lib. after maturity.

This is where hungry youth departs with a flea in his ear. Eat your spinach, kid, and not too much of it. The pie a la mode is for papa.

Mr. Richberg's Plan.

In an address to a meeting of local business executives this week Donald R. Richberg outlined a plan for orderly co-operation between Government and industry which offers both a practical and a liberal approach to solution of that much-discussed problem.

As on previous occasions the former head of the NRA stressed the value of self-regulation of industry under voluntary co-operative agreements. But at the same time he emphasized that "the ordinary individual will not and cannot plan for social gains." Therefore it becomes essential, in the public interest, that the Government should direct and supervise the plans and programs formulated by co-operating business units.

As a practical step towards giving effect to his proposals, Mr. Richberg suggests that a permanent bureau of industrial economics should be set up in the Department of Commerce. Its function would be to perform for industry services comparable to those which the Bureau of Agricultural Economics performs for the farmer.

The suggestion is one that The Post has recently on several occasions indorsed as a means for establishing closer, mutually beneficial contacts between Government and industry. In a letter to the editor published today, Secretary Roper gives the welcome information that a small appropriation has already been made to initiate studies into the possibilities of the development.

Such a service, to be useful to associated trades and industries in the formulation of policy, would of course have to maintain intimate and amicable working arrangements with the prosecuting agencies of Government. As Mr. Richberg says: "There must be freedom from criminal penalties and punishments for efforts undertaken under public scrutiny and in the public interest." The Department of Commerce would have no better success than the Federal Trade Commission in assisting industry to curb competitive excesses if the Department of Justice reserved the right to launch anti-trust suits against its proteges for following official advice.

Any bureau, given large discretionary powers to advise business as to what it might do without risk of prosecution under the anti-trust laws, should itself be subject to some measure of external control and guidance. Such a check, Mr. Richberg suggests, might be provided through a policy-making economic council, selected to aid the head of the proposed bureau of industrial economics in passing upon trade agreements and association plans.

In brief, the plan seeks to encourage business to organize voluntarily whenever and wherever its aims are legitimate. It would be the important duty of the supervising Government agency to supply expert advice and guidance to such organized industries, always remembering that protection of the public interest must take precedence over consideration of private gain.

Government Price Fixing.

The order of the United States Court of Appeals suspending application of minimum coal prices fixed by the Bituminous Coal Commission is issued "without prejudice to an ultimate ruling."

In other words the court did not consider the reasonableness of the price schedules but simply granted a temporary injunction to afford opportunity for a hearing before the new prices become effective.

The order, however, calls public attention to the inconsistency of a governmental policy which denounces price fixing in unqualified fashion while a Federal agency issues orders raising the prices of railroad fuel in accordance with some esoteric cost-of-production formula. The fact that orders were issued before permitting the interests affected to be heard introduces an arbitrary element into the proceedings. But even the most exhaustive inquiry into the effects of coal-price-fixing decrees could not prevent dislocations of an unexpected and injurious nature.

Higher fuel costs for the roads not only increase their expenses of operation but create obstacles to increases in freight rates on coal transported for other consumers. Similarly, manufacturing groups faced with the prospect of paying higher prices for coal may have to adjust prices charged for produced goods. And cities in the position of Cleveland, claiming an addition of $500 daily to fuel costs, may be faced by new budgetary problems.

Of course readjustments necessitated by the demoralized state of the coal industry are essential. It does not follow, however, that relief should take the form of a system of rigid price regulations such as have been set up under the coal control act. Most certainly it is illogical for spokesmen of the Administration to urge price reductions and expatiate upon the blessings of competition, and the evils of monopolistic price fixing, while raising prices of formerly competitively produced commodities by Federal decree.

Another sign of the cockeyed times: A State Legislature, which recently passed a law against games of chance, exempted churches and charitable institutions.

And when your sins do find you out, they invariably find you down and out.

To Guide Industry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to compliment you on the constructive editorial that appeared in the February 4 issue of The Washington Post, under the title "Tragi-Comedy."

I was particularly impressed with the last two paragraphs, which stressed the advisability of setting up a unit in the Department of Commerce to study industrial economics for the guidance of commerce and industry. This would look to needed service to American business comparable with that performed for agriculture by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. For some time we have been planning for such service in the Department of Commerce and a small appropriation has been made to initiate such studies.

The Department of Commerce is endeavoring to render every possible assistance to business in the solution of its problems, but we recognize the need of coordinated activity along this line and are working to that end. It is encouraging to note your co-operation.

Regard For English.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While my ancestors came from England several centuries ago, I am an American in every sense of the word, and hold no brief for the defense of England. Still I am surprised at the apparent antipathy on the part of many of your correspondents to anything English, and unable to understand why it is so, and why they should think England only wants the United States to "pull her chestnuts" out of the fire.

I have visited England many times and spent weeks and months with Englishmen. I think I know the English character and their feelings toward America fairly well. I am sure we have no better friends in the world, and they look upon us "bone of their bone and flesh of their flesh." With similar language, similar fundamental laws and with the same point of view in many instances, they regard us as friends—never as possible enemies. In fact, I regard the English as the only real friends we have.

They have proven their friendship in many ways. During the Spanish-American War they were on our side and kept Germany, and mayhap other European nations, from joining Spain. During the imbroglio with Japan over the Chinese-Japanese exclusion act, though England had a treaty with Japan to maintain the status quo in the Pacific, Lord Grey notified Japan that in event of war with us she could not count on England's help.

It is true England owes us money and would like to repay it, in goods in kind, but we have insisted on gold, and seemingly, like Shylock, demand our pound of flesh. At this time England is threatened with danger on all sides and it is necessary for her to bend every energy to rearm and be ready to preserve the empire, and she is spending billions of money to accomplish that objective. It is also true that England canceled more than $5,000,000,000 that was owed her by the allies before America got into the war.

With the present condition of world affairs, I believe the only hope of preserving democracy, and even civilization itself, is a union of England, France and the United States. An understanding that these three nations would stand together in case of a war with the German-Italian-Japan bloc would do more than anything else to secure the peace of the world which we all so ardently crave.

About The Penguins.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just a few words anent the little penguin and her egg or eggs at the zoo.

The approximately 20 species of this Chaplinized family have clutches which may consist of one, two, three or four eggs, but the chances of more than one surviving even the baby stage are remote. While building their nests of rocks or twigs, it may be that both parents will be simultaneously away in search of material. A lazy neighbor may then purloin some of the nest rather than hustle for it; but should it be caught in the act, it most sheepishly drops it and, very humiliated, retires.

This genus is the speediest as well as the deepest-swimming of the penguins. They migrate by the thousands to long-established rookeries many miles away, but with a considerable sacrifice to their ranks by voracious deep-sea life.

Many of the islands about Cape Colony, South Africa, have been rookeries quite beyond the time of man. The eggs are eaten chiefly by the natives and the Malay settlers. White settlers are somewhat slow in acquiring the taste. The white of the egg fails to congeal to even more than a thick jelly-like substance in even a 15-minute boil.

Air Raids In Spain.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an editorial on February 1, 1938, on the basis of conflicting, unreliable reports from Barcelona, The Post said: "This terrorism is unlikely to strengthen the rebel cause. It goes far to cancel out the anti-clerical outrages perpetrated by adherents of the government."

In our judgment this embodies bad history and bad ethics. In the New York Times of February 6, under the signature of Mr. Herbert L. Matthews, an acknowledged partisan of the Barcelona regime, there is an intelligible explanation of the bombing of the eastern coast of Spain. Mr. Matthews wrote: "It was not until the Loyalists got their air fields cleared and could concentrate most of their planes around Teruel that they started to hold their own with the rebels. But that meant leaving the eastern coast partly unguarded, and Italian-made planes from Majorca had things pretty much as they desired."

To any fair-minded person it must be obvious that the Barcelona regime must share some of the responsibility for the bombings. Incidentally, during my own recent sojourn in Spain I repeatedly saw the bloody, mangled bodies of women and children, killed by Russian pilots in Russian planes, admittedly in the service of the Barcelona regime. One of the towns was Caceres, an unfortified, unmilitary objective, far behind the Nationalist lines. Before an editorial of this kind is penned, I submit that some time for verification should be allowed to elapse.

Now let us study the bad ethics of your editorial writer. The gentleman in question attempts to defend the outmoded doctrine of retaliation, an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. Murder, I submit, never cancels out murder. In this instance, I would suggest that military bombing, justified or unjustified, does not cancel out the murder of 15,000 priests, unnumbered innocent nuns and at least 400,000 civilians of all ages and conditions. There is abundant evidence for each one of these statements and I have examined the evidence, not in an editorial office in Washington, but near the graves of Spain.

Ability Vs. Education.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read Mr. Edwin Evans' letter in today's Post regarding civil service efficiency—or the lack of it—with interest.

Mr. Evans' comparison of the $1,800 annual income (as of 1932) of Government employes with the $1,170 income of doctors, lawyers and architects is somewhat specious. We all know professional men who would fit much better in a job as plumber or chauffeur, their only qualification for medicine or architecture being ambition.

As to lawyers, that calling has been for many years greatly overcrowded. I know a score of lawyers right here in Washington who have shingles hanging out for part-time work, after their Government employment as typists or clerks, but who garner very little in that fashion, because they just aren't capable. The law schools will graduate them, but they can't guarantee them a practice.

Agreed that there are incompetents in the Government service, as everywhere else, and that there are inequalities. Every Government bureau would be happy to replace dubs with capable men, if those men — or women — will qualify through examination. If a person starts as file clerk and works up to senior auditor, I believe he deserves commendation, not criticism. Let some of Mr. Evans' highly touted unemployed university graduates take examinations for some of the more humble Government positions. If they are the balls of fire he would have us think, no doubt their superiority will be recognized and they, too, will achieve promotion. But the solution certainly is not, as Mr. Evans apparently thinks, to restrict the more desirable positions to university graduates.

There are many intelligent, ambitious and hard-working persons with no more than high school educations who can show up some of the educated ignoramuses turned out by universities. Shall we deny advancement to them because circumstances denied them the privilege of attending a university?

When Freedom Perishes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A government does not need to turn Communistic to frustrate individual initiative and freedom in civic and religious matters. All any government needs to do to destroy rugged individualism and the personal conscience is to glorify the doctrine that the end justifies the means.

Between the doctrine that the end justifies the means and pure Marxian communism lies only the difference between Tweedledee and Tweedledum.

To satisfy the hunger of the spirit is greater than to satisfy the hunger of the body. To sacrifice the aspirations of the spirit is to perish as free men.

Tragedy in Stillwater.

I HAVE spent so many summers in Stillwater that its handful of inhabitants looks like part of Massachusetts scenery to me; so I naturally was amazed to tear into Claggett's Pharmacy for a coke and find a strange woman doing away with a pineapple flip in my favorite booth.

She didn't look up immediately and I seized upon the opportunity to surmise on her appearance. Strictly New York, I decided with a thrill. Wide-brimmed summer straw (nobody in Stillwater owns a summer hat), sophisticated hair-do cascading in a single golden ripple to the shoulders of a trim, white suit. How impeccable, I thought ecstatically.

She looked up and threw me a wide, white smile, and I blushed in confusion; it always ruins my pride to be discovered gaping at another girl, and I was sadly conscious of my faded shorts and the sand in my shoes. I am 17, but at that particular moment I felt like a kid.

She extended exquisite fingers at the length of a sun-tanned arm. "I'm a little lonely," she said, and her voice was deep. "Sit down with me and have some ice cream or something."

What poise I possess deserts me when I need it most. I shuffled uncomfortably into the booth. Jerry, who is our soda-jerker and the cynic of Stillwater, rushed off with moose eyes to fix me a flip, and desperately I watched his departure. Two months in Stillwater had stumped me for conversation with the civilized world; I couldn't say a word.

I fidgeted a glance at my hostess. In the afternoon sun streaming through Claggett's window she looked like a coke advertisement, all radiant and glowing. I thought I had never seen anyone so beautiful. Jerry set down my flip, and she looked up at him, or rather through him, and spoke fervently.

"Massachusetts!" she breathed. "With your cold, clear lakes and your barren dunes—with your deep, dark nights and your hot, bright noons!" Jerry dropped his jaw. She drew a deep breath. "Embrace me, my Massachusetts!" she demanded, finishing her flip in defiant triumph, and Jerry's face would have embarrassed a strawberry. I guess he was wishing his name was Massachusetts.

"That's just a line from a play," she laughed. I was relieved; I had been racking my memory for something sacred to say about sand dunes. "Perhaps I'd better introduce myself," she said. "I'm Rowena Windcliffe. I'm with the Shoreline Players."

I lifted a face full of adoration and pineapple sirup. She was an actress.

"We're opening tonight at the Stillwater Playhouse," she said. "'Stolen Tears.' It's the grandest part I've had yet." She glowed with anticipation; she was terribly thrilled. "I hope you'll be there," she added, and squeezed my hand.

I beamed. It was opening night at the Playhouse, and if you didn't go you were ill or awfully prosaic. And here I was actually sitting in Claggett's Pharmacy with the leading lady. I bolted my ice cream in excitement.

She had to leave at 3 for dress rehearsal, and long after she had gone I sat there thinking about Life and how wonderful it must be to be as beautiful as Rowena Windcliffe.

I was practically the first person to arrive at the Playhouse, and ages before 8 my program was as crumpled as my linen dress. I was restless and excited. Miss Windcliffe was to play "Cynthia," and Stillwater, Mass., seemed very far away indeed when I thought of how she would drift in, cool and languid, trailing pale chiffon—Cynthia, sweet symphony of sighs, intaglio of the night. I drew a quavering breath, and Aunt Susan leaned over and asked if I was ill.

A hush fell over the hall, the curtain swung back uncertainly. There was revealed a colorful room, and a gray-haired matron stepped across the stage to the foot of a staircase. "Cynthia," she called briskly.

My heart stood still.

There was a sound on the steps. "Yes ma'm," droned a piteous voice, and the audience tittered. I hastily checked my program and my heart hit a new low. It was indeed Rowena Windcliffe. I dragged my eyes back to the stage as she descended. Her hair was jerked into a hard, tight knot, and her beautiful face was disfigured with soot. She slopped across the stage in run-over shoes, hands pulling nervously at a baggy apron, and began to dust, whining a tuneless bar. Stillwater was convulsed. The audience roared with delight. Rowena Windcliffe was a success.

I slipped quietly down in my seat and closed my eyes. It was too awful.

Justice In Chicago.

Chicago.

AL CAPONE, Mayor Ed Kelley and Robert W. Sweitzer, former county clerk of Cook County, are among the most interesting figures in the history of Chicago.

As is well known, Mr. Capone is the victim of a bum rap in the sense that his sentence of 11 years for violation of the Federal income tax law is excessive. No other convicted violator has been punished so severely, and the accepted truth of the matter is that Capone is also serving time for bootlegging and brothel keeping and for an indefinite degree of blame in an indefinite number of killings.

PEGLER.

Other violators have been allowed to make deals with the Treasury, but Capone had given the Government much trouble and Chicago a bad name, so the income tax law was stretched to cover all manner of sins.

By the same process, a political opponent of an unscrupulous administration could be removed from the scene for 11 years and possibly driven insane by the rigors of life on Alcatraz, where Capone has broken under the strain. Viewed in this light, the procedure in the income tax case against some of Huey Long's men was more interesting than the public generally understood.

• • • •

MR. KELLY also had income tax difficulties a few years ago, but the Treasury took a different view. After some sniping in the Chicago papers and by political enemies, Mr. Kelly decided to take the citizens into his confidence, not for personal considerations, but to protect the fair name of Chicago, of which he naturally feels himself to be a protector. He decided that the city was being slandered and therefore made a statement explaining all.

Mr. Kelly stated that his earnings for the ten years between 1919 and 1929 were $724,787, of which $151,000 was salary, and explained that for several years he had been fortunate in his business dealings. At times during this period he found it necessary to advance money to his party for political expenses, and when these advances were returned to him he did not regard that money as income and therefore did not include it as such.

The Government, however, decided that these items must be listed as income and, because his returns already were in the higher brackets, thanks to his good fortune with his business dealings, his tax was increased by $60,000. This, with the penalties and interest, brought the amount of his settlement to about $110,000.

Mr. Kelly still contends that the reimbursement was not income, and therefore not taxable, and it is indeed dreadful to consider that a distinguished citizen may be held up for $110,000 tax on his own money returning from a loan.

• • • •

MR. SWEITZER is another faithful public servant who suffered for his prominence in the line of battle for good government.

After long service in the office of county clerk he was accused of holding back from his successor $400,000, consisting chiefly of money laid down by buyers of tax liens on delinquent property. The money was called the vest-pocket fund, and Mr. Sweitzer's counsel declared in court that it did not belong to the taxpayers, but to the tax buyers, whom he described as vultures. Mr. Sweitzer suffered acutely from the foul injustice of the charge and vowed that he was eager to turn over the money, but naturally could not do so until he was given an exact accounting of the amount due. He wanted to be scrupulously exact, but the condition of the books was such that it was impossible to agree on the amount.

To the eternal credit of the jury's sense of justice, Mr. Sweitzer was vindicated and enjoys today with Mr. Kelly the respect of his fellow citizens. He is still eager to turn over the money when the proper conditions are met.

So Justice does her stuff in Chicago. In the exact sense Capone was overpunished, but, by and large, he had it coming. Mr. Kelly is a martyr to the extent of $110,000, but his good name is intact and Mr. Sweitzer's honor was only rubbed brighter in the courts.

The Goose Step Again.

Mussolini is now out as head man in a big revival of "The Goose Step," or "Why Walk Like a Human Being?"

• • • •

Most people were disgusted, offended, sickened and annoyed by the goose step and shrank from it as a symbol of ruthlessness, destruction, desolation and death more than 20 years ago, but Benito finds it a lovely memory and is out to re-glorify it.

• • • •

The first report from Rome that Italy was reviving the Strut of Death was received skeptically, but it seems it wasn't too bad to be true. Daily tidings from Italy continue to show Mussolini lauding it and commending it to his people as one of the most inspiring forms of mass marching.

• • • •

He calls it the Passo Romano, but it is the old 1914 German model goose step which we used to shrink from in the newsreels.

• • • •

The goose step is the answer to a strutter's prayer. The world had thought nobody would openly care to promote that kind of strutting again. But now Mussolini not only promotes it but paints it as symbolizing strength, energy and good citizenship!

• • • •

Witnesses say that the Italians put more "umph" into it and make the Kaiser's goose steppers look like pussyfooters with fallen arches.

• • • •

They say that when you see an Italian soldier on the march his general attitude is that of a victim of advanced arthritis still trying to kick a field goal using both feet at once.

• • • •

Mussolini is still not satisfied. He wants the mothers clubs to adopt it.

• • • •

It is reported that he had the mothers try it out the other day but they had great difficulty doing it without kicking the bottom out of the baby carriage.

• • • •

"It is a step which office workers, fat men and runts can never do," declares Benito. "That is why we desire it."

• • • •

• • • •

Are you serious, Benito? Or is this really the beginning of a government war against spaghetti and those eight course Italian dinners with red wine?"

Georgia has gone wet after 22 years of prohibition. Or in other words, gone wet after 22 years of being wet.

For the second time in three years a washerwoman has won the women's open golf championship of the Philippines. She is, of course, a wonder with her irons.

Gears Of Neutrality

Observer Stresses Implications Of Isolation, Seeing Collective Action Only Feasible Course For United States.

By Livingston Hartley,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE PRESIDENT'S request for more battleships and cruisers, the testimony of Admiral Leahy before the Naval Affairs Committee of the House and the demands of certain Senators for a clarification of our national aims in world affairs have focused public interest upon the foreign policy of the Administration. Is this policy to swing still further toward isolation, as a powerful group in Congress would like, or is it to turn instead toward more adequate protection of American interests abroad?

The answer to this question may prove crucial to the future welfare of our country and, perhaps, to the future history of the world. It is imperative, for this reason, that the public and Congress should visualize clearly the real price they must pay for isolation and realize that it is a policy necessarily geared to war.

Although the United States today is by no means pulling its full weight in world affairs, it still exerts a powerful influence overseas in support of peace, respect for treaties, increasing international trade and other American objectives. The State Department is working now at high pressure to safeguard American interests throughout the world, the greatest of which is our own national security. Our foreign policy has hence been regarded as our "first line of national defense;" only if it fails in its purpose need the admirals who command our second defensive line undertake actively to protect the Nation.

Isolation Would End Need For Diplomacies.

ISOLATION would automatically paralyze our foreign policy as an instrument of national defense. Our diplomacy would cease to concern itself with the march of events abroad, allowing these events to proceed unhindered, through peace and through war, toward conclusions which might drastically impair our national safety. Discarding recklessly our potent diplomatic aces of primacy in economic and financial power, we would rely for safety on our admirals alone.

Under isolation, for instance, we would play no part in determining the course of Pacific history. We should avert our eyes not only from China, but also from the fate of strategically placed groups of Pacific islands. If Japan should seize the British and French chain of islands which stretch across the South Seas to the Marquesas, we would presumably take no action except to withdraw from Guam and Samoa. But a policy of withdrawal could not be extended to the Panama Canal, which would then be exposed to a surprise attack by the bigger Japanese bombers of the future, operating from their newly won Marquesas base. Only more ships and more planes could close the defensive gap created by consistent isolation.

We might also have to close another defensive gap at the other end of our Pacific front, if the Japanese drove the Russians out of eastern Siberia and reached the Bering Straits. We should have to protect Alaska then by troops and tanks as well as ships and planes, and could only do so by creating a bigger and better army. Even on the Pacific alone, isolation would seem destined to keep our armament factories humming.

Defense Of Atlantic Might Prove Staggering.

IT IS on the Atlantic, however, where the strategic pride of isolation might prove so appalling. Our country is today very happily situated on this ocean, as is shown by the fact that we habitually concentrate our battlefleet off California, over 4,800 miles from New York.

Under existing political conditions, we have no need to defend ourselves against the greatest transatlantic seapower, not only because of our unique relationship with it and mutual world interests, but also because the geographical position of Canada sets a definite lower limit to Anglo-American relations.

We know, furthermore, although no treaty or understanding proclaims the fact, that the Monroe Doctrine and our own Atlantic security are actually protected from European challenge by the British navy. This protective role does not rest upon sentimental ties, but upon very concrete British interests, since the communications of the empire and its important South American markets would be menaced by a successful European attack on our hemisphere. To fill this role, moreover, costs the British nothing, as it is entirely negative. Owing to British control of the eastern Atlantic from home ports and Gibraltar, no European power can send its fleet across the Atlantic without a prior guarantee of British nonintervention.

If we turned now whole-heartedly to isolation, we would make no effort whatsoever to preserve these fortunate conditions on our Atlantic flank. We should have to expect, consequently, that these conditions might be drastically altered by a European war, and make preparations in advance for this contingency. There is little doubt that if Germany and Italy emerged victoriously from such a war, in control of the European waves and the strategically placed West Africa coast, the American hemisphere would require active defense by the American Navy on the Atlantic as well as the Pacific.

Totalitarian Alliance Could Threaten New World.

EVEN so sketchy a glance at practical contingencies shows how isolation is geared to war. This policy implies necessarily a readiness to fight simultaneously on both our flanks any possible combination of enemies. Such a combination exists now in the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo partnership; should it achieve its aims in the eastern hemisphere, it could hardly be expected to respect the "No Trespassing" sign we have painted over the western. Yet our fleet is far from adequate now for protection against this combination on both our oceans.

Part of the price of isolation, consequently, is a Navy such as has never sailed the seas, comprising a Pacific Fleet superior to the Japanese and an Atlantic Fleet stronger than the united forces of any possible European coalition. A two-power standard, such as the British maintained a generation ago, would not be enough. We should have to maintain a two-ocean standard in seapower, which would swallow yearly a sizable part of even a Roosevelt budget. Whether we could maintain such a standard permanently is doubtful; in whatever degree we failed to do so, we should imperil the isolated safety of our people.

The economic price of isolation is better understood by the American people. This would consist not only of literally billions for armaments, but also of a further loss of billions in exports and imports.

Our foreign commerce would have to be cut to fit strategic requirements, since dependence on overseas markets and raw materials constitutes a weakness in the war position of an isolated nation. There would be no need to circumscribe our trade in the Caribbean area, where our command of the sea would be absolute. But trade with Europe and Asia would have to be drastically restricted, in order to create a storm-proof, self-sufficient, war economy. This would entail a lowered standard of living for the American people, as we decimated our foreign commerce and produced synthetically the essential materials we lack, necessary steps to make isolation safe for America.

Loss Of Philippines Would Strike At Pride.

LESS CONCRETE costs inherent in a hermit policy should also be mentioned. A damaging loss of national self-respect would seem inevitable as we shrank away from the main current of history, prepared to watch Japan make a "Manchukuo" of the Filipino people we have raised to be a nation, and see war and fascism destroy overseas the things for which our country has always stood.

It would, moreover, be folly under isolation to allow expressions of public opprobrium to create avoidable friction with expansionist autocracies overseas. Censorship of the press would then seem essential to our national safety, implying a heavy cost in individual liberty.

If the price of real isolation is so unthinkable, it would seem wise to turn our backs on this policy once and for all. Partial isolation, along the lines of the neutrality act, has already been proved inadequate either to safeguard our Pacific interests, or, as our new Navy program indicates, to insure us against involvement in war.

Common sense suggests, accordingly, a swing the other way, toward effective co-operation. This implies the use of our vast diplomatic influence and predominant economic and financial power to safeguard American peace and security, instead of relying, as our isolationists would, upon shells and bombs alone.

Aftermath Of The German Purge.

THE FULL MEANING and significance of the recent shake-up in the German army and government continues to be obscure, a circumstance which explains the fantastic rumors concerning present-day developments in the Third Reich.

Certainly it is far from clear what the long-range consequences of this dramatic occurrence are likely to be either within Germany itself or with respect to the outside world. But two important effects the bloodless purge of February 4-5 has already had.

In the first place it has tended to destroy the myth of Nazi Germany as a monolithic state capable of doing the will of a dictator who knows precisely where he is going and how to get there. The Third Reich now stands revealed as a nation which, like the democracies which the Nazis so heartily despise, is rent with internal schisms and plagued by an unending struggle for power by conflicting elements.

The second consequence, growing, in part, out of the first, is that the latest German purge has galvanized every European power into re-examining the latest list of friends and enemies.

• • • •

NOT KNOWING JUST what the events of February 4-5 mean or what they may lead to, every nation in the Old World has had to consider three possibilities.

The first is that Hitler's action means a victory for the Nazi extremists who more than ever will now direct Germany's internal and external policies, regardless of what army leaders might think about it.

The second is that despite certain appearances, such as the appointment of Ribbentrop as foreign minister, the real victor in the German crisis is the army and with it the possibility that Hitler will be inhibited from embarking on any rash adventures for which Germany is not yet fully prepared in a military way.

And there is the third possibility, that the struggle in the Third Reich which led to Blomberg's resignation and its dramatic aftermath is not yet over.

Now, obviously, no nation on or near the European firing line can afford to wait until one or another of these possibilities becomes a reality. For their own safety they must prepare for any and every dangerous eventuality that may soon or late follow the German army purge. At the same time it is also to their interest to take whatever advantage they can of Germany's present uncertainty.

• • • •

It is no secret that over a period of many months Great Britain has sought to persuade Mussolini to bury the hatchet.

A year ago such efforts met with temporary success. An Anglo-Italian treaty pledging both powers to maintain the status quo in the Mediterranean was signed. But the ink on it was hardly dry before the treaty became meaningless. Since then several other attempts to restore friendship between the two countries have occurred. They have all come to naught.

Failing in the effort to win Mussolini's friendship, Great Britain sought to win the friendship of Hitler. These efforts, too, met with a promising response from time to time but never led to any constructive results. On the contrary, every British attempt to woo one or the other partners of the Berlin-Rome axis only strengthened the belief of the dictators that this axis had its very real uses as a blackmailing device.

• • • •

THE PRESENT Anglo-Italian negotiations, for all the friendliness in which they are being conducted, may have no happier results than those of earlier days. And yet the fact cannot be ignored that this time the situation has changed. For the first time since the Berlin-Rome axis came into being Mussolini must take into account the possibility that Hitler, his enemy of yesterday and his friend of today may, tomorrow, again be his enemy.

The Duce cannot ignore that one consequence of the army purge may be a Nazi thrust in the direction of Austria.

Now it has never been to Italy's interest to see Germany absorb Austria, a development which would bring a considerably enlarged Third Reich to the very borders of the Italian kingdom. Just below the Brenner Pass are the 250,000 German-speaking inhabitants of South Tyrol. Had Hitler not agreed to shelve his ambitions regarding Austria, the Berlin-Rome axis would have remained an impossibility.

• • • •

THE ITALIAN reaction to the German crisis, therefore, has been to try to balance Britain against the Reich by entering into new negotiations for a settlement of outstanding Italo-British difficulties. For the first time in months, therefore, Britain's immediate interests and Italy's are parallel.

This does not mean, however, that an Italo-British accord is necessarily in the offing. Now, as heretofore, it may be possible for Mussolini to discount Britain's note in Berlin. Now, as before, he can go to the Fuehrer and point out to him that without Italy Germany would be isolated and that the price of continued German-Italian friendship is hands-off Austria.

Indeed, there is every reason to believe that so long as Germany attempts no adventure in the direction of Austria, Italy even while coming to terms with Great Britain will try to keep Germany in line as well.

• • • •

IN ANY EVENT the German crisis has made the European situation extraordinarily fluid. Those nations, such as Yugoslavia, Rumania and Poland, which had decided that with the Third Reich as strong and united as it appeared to be until the purge occurred, they had better make a deal with Hitler, may now have some second thoughts on the subject. The latest Rumanian developments certainly indicate that the Bucharest government is far from being the ripe plum about to fall into Hitler's lap that some argued it was.

The little powers are now going to wait and see which way the Nazi cat jumps. In the meantime they will be under pressure to mend their fences with respect to other countries such as France and Russia.

It is obviously a day-to-day policy which all European countries are now compelled to pursue. European diplomacy is in a highly mercurial state. It jumps with each rise and fall of the German temperature. There is nothing permanent about it except its impermanence.

Political Paradox

By Edmund Wilson.

George Bernard Shaw.

THE REAL SHAW, has never been the single-minded crusader that people at one time used to think him. Except for a limited period during the '80s and early '90s—when he wrote his only straight Socialist plays, "Widowers' Houses" and "Mrs. Warren's Profession"—he has never really been a practicing Socialist. And as he has grown older and as the world has been shaken out of the pattern to which he had adapted his early attitudes, the inadequacy of those attitudes has been exposed.

In his political utterances since the war, it is too much to say that Bernard Shaw has made a jackass of himself. In the autumn of 1927 staying in Italy on the Lago Maggiore and t bouquets at Mussolini. In his old admiration romantic hero, his old glorification—which w likely to be set off by an imperialist as a Ma theme—of the great statesman who makes peo stand around.

• • • •

IN 1931 Shaw visited Soviet Russia in company with the Tory Lady Astor and the Liberal Marquess of Lothian, had an audience with Stalin, at which, as he said, they treated Stalin like "a friendly emperor," and on his return, began loudly indorsing Russia and especially scolding the United States for not following the Soviet example.

Later, in his "Preface on Bosses" in his volume of plays of 1936, he was back praising Mussolini again and even throwing a few kind words to Hitler, whom he described as "not a stupid German" (perhaps because he is merely a crazy Austrian) and whose persecution of the Jews he characterized considerately as "a craze, a complex, a bee in his bonnet, a hole in his armor, a hitch in his statesmanship, one of those lesions which sometimes prove fatal."

Of the systematic persecution by the Nazis of Communists, Socialists and pacifists, of everybody—including critics and artists—who belong to Bernard Shaw's own camp, he has nothing whatever to say save to mention it and minimize it in passing as "plundering raids and coups d'etat against inconvenient liberals or Marxists."

Tom McCarthy

"He Sets There So Natural!"

TODAY they'll be marching up to it, and laying wreaths before it. But yesterday there were the usual people. And they were undergoing the usual reactions.

McCARTHY.

The guard at the Lincoln Memorial had counted less than 300 visitors, but despite the snow and the cold those that came exhibited the usual reactions. But the usual reactions are strange. That is, they are not the workaday reactions of average people.

Yesterday they drifted up the steps in twos and threes, their eyes held by the far-seeing, dreaming eyes of the marble statue. When they came in they did what they always do. The men started to remove their hats, until the guard assured that it was quite all right to keep them on. The women lowered their voices.

And standing under the great, gaunt figure of Abraham Lincoln, they talked in small whispers, their backs to the graying sky, and the slate-colored pool, and the dimly discernible Washington Monument.

They may have been hard-boiled businessmen back in Indiana, or Oklahoma, but when they stood there they did what people always do. They talked out of their hearts. And they said things close to poetry. They said things that back home they might have laughed about. They said things which, if repeated to them, would sound strangely on their ears.

They straggled up the steps in groups of two or three, and they stood there, not thinking anything about the proximity of Lincoln's birthday. And they didn't half hear the guard when he came out of his little wooden house, stamped his feet, and told them what he read in a book somewhere.

"It says in a big book I read," said the guard, "some mighty fine things about this statue of Abraham Lincoln. And it said that the statue emanates ('that's a big word,' the guard interjected) greatness, power, gentleness, and determination."

• • • • •

BUT THE VISITORS didn't pay much attention to the guard. They just looked upward toward the heavy marble face, and the eyes that dreamed out across the slate-gray pool, with its now whitened borders. The tourists just kept their eyes on the face as it dreamed out over the city, looking at, but not seeing, the gray outline of the monument, and the dark bare trees.

And while they looked, they talked things out of their hearts that they wouldn't have said before strangers without blushing, if the statue hadn't been there.

"Look at the hand," one tall, gaunt man said. "It's so natural." But he said it very gently. His name was William Clark, and he came from Fulton, N. Y., where he was in the paper box business.

"It's a wonderful thing," he said, walking around it, his eyes marveling at the heavy hands, with the knuckles spread and sprung.

"And the eyes," he said, not talking at all like a man who made paper boxes for a living, "they're strange. I know, as I walked up the steps with the snow coming down, and saw them, they seemed to make me welcome here."

Mr. Clark shoved his hands into the pockets of his blue overcoat, and rambled on, not at all as though he were talking to a reporter, but rather as though he were thinking aloud.

"I've got two daughters back in Fulton," he said. "One of them is in third-year high. The other's just starting. My, they'll have to see this."

• • • •

THERE WERE two young fellows at the Memorial yesterday standing in the quick gray dusk which settled down with the snow. They were pretty typical high school kids. And they told me they happened to be there because they waited for their father to pick them up in front of the Memorial every day. Howard and John Wickert, of Falls Church, Va., they're regular fellows who attend classes at Western High here in the District.

"We meet Dad down here every day," they told me. "He's in the Army War College. And we stand here while we wait. We don't get tired of looking at the statue."

"I'm sort of glad the building is open to the wind and rain," Howard said. "There's something fine and rugged about this place, the way the wind can sweep the snow in. I think it's just about what Lincoln might have wanted.

"I mean, I think he'd like to sit here looking out over the city, with the rain and snow pelting in."

• • • •

TODAY, the Nation will pay homage to Lincoln, but the real tribute remains in the hearts of those who find that his sculptured presence, the image of his hands, twisted and knuckled like those of a boxer, calls up a strange softness to the voice.

The real tribute remains in the hearts of his people, who still stand in his sculptured presence, and talk quietly about such things as the wind and the rain, and their daughters who are in third-year high and must "see this thing," if only once.

And the tribute is that men born years after his time still look up at his statue, and say very quietly, "The eyes seem to make me welcome."

They expected that the eyes would make them welcome. Lincoln was like that.

Not so long ago, the public regarded the forests as nothing more than ample places for men to hunt in, as places for Boy Scouts to learn to build fires in . . . But the economic aspects have long engaged the Government and now, according to a pamphlet, "Careers in Forestry," it appears that an increasing interest is being shown in the subject by individuals and schools. Enrollment in forestry schools in this country totaled more than 6,000 during the last school year and figures from the schools indicate that about 500 degrees are being granted annually. Professional foresters now number about 6,000 . . .

Incidentally, there is a girlish-appearing woman now at the Agriculture Department who is a full-fledged forester. She desires no publicity but a good story would be back of the reasons why she chose a profession so tailored for men . . .

Some 25 universities now offer courses in the subject. "Many persons still have only a vague idea of the kind of life the forester really leads," the bulletin states. "Young men are often attracted to the profession because of the prospect of outdoor work. They are fond of camping in the open and of hunting and fishing. One who is considerings such a career should remember that the forester in his field work sometimes must endure hardships that sportsmen do not encounter. Spending considerable time in the woods as part of one's regular business is quite different from camping out for a few weeks on vacation. And this, we suppose, is because no school can teach a man to harden entirely against loneliness or give him a complete immunity against mosquitoes and chiggers.

Traffic Offenders Face Dual Hazard of Judge and Microphones

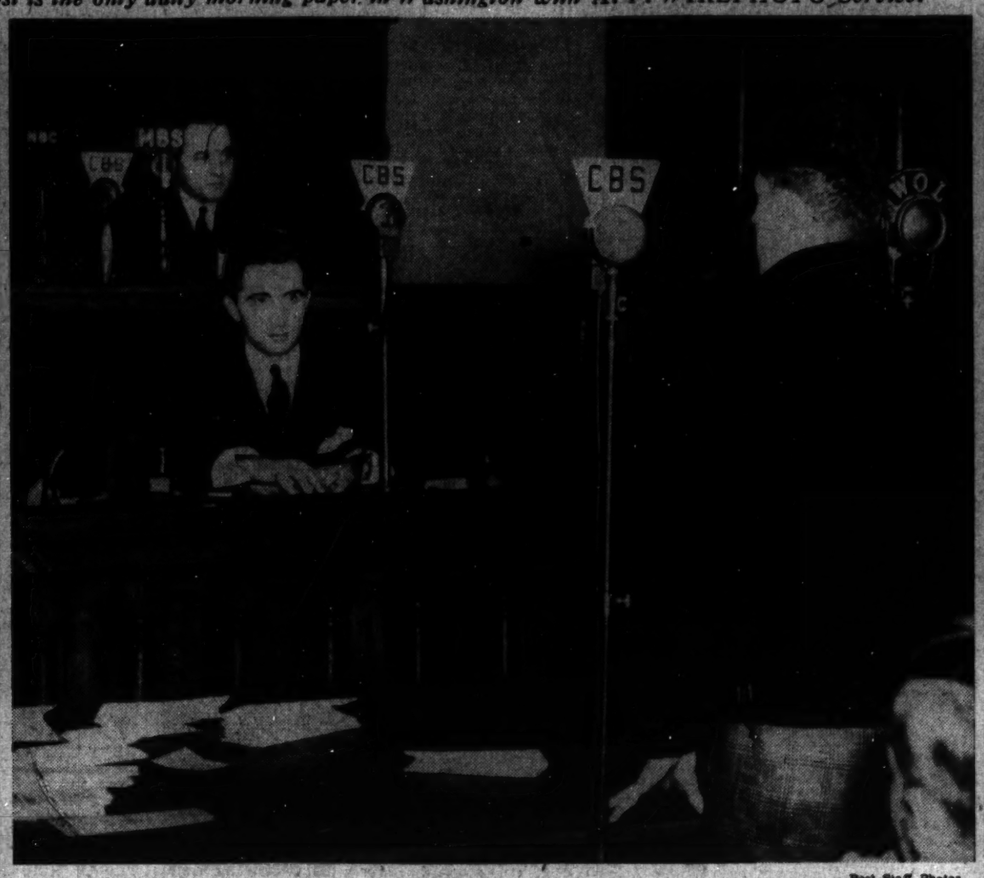
1 To make motorists more aware of traffic hazards in the Capital, proceedings in Traffic Court yesterday were broadcast for the first time. Policeman H. M. Jewell, of Fourth Precinct, was among the first to face the battery of microphones as he took the oath before testifying.



Post Staff Photos.

2 Mental hazards were double in court as defendants not only had to face a judge, Hobart Newman, but also six microphones scattered about the bar. Judge Newman is in the background, his clerk is before him, and with his back to the camera is a defendant, more than likely making his debut on the air. Radio listeners heard the time-worn stories usually heard in Traffic Court—but the memory of stiff fines handed out is expected to linger on as a warning to obey the law.

3 Defendants spoke directly into microphones as they told their story to the judge. The embarrassment associated with the broadcasts which will continue for several days may make motorists more cautious, officials believe.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Asks How to Overcome Timidity Which Turns Voice Into Croak and Smile Into Sickly Grin.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Some time ago you gave excellent advice to a girl who asked what to do about her awkward, tongue-tied confusion when trying to talk to persons she had just met. She seemed to be in a pretty bad way. You told her not to be so self-centered and then gave her some specific suggestions for making conversation. I meant to save that article, but the paper got lost, so I am asking you to please repeat the advice.

• • • •

You see, I have the same trouble, and while I used to be much worse than I am now, I still get flustered and uneasy when introduced or when I meet a date. Men are easier to talk to than women, at first; but if you discover you haven't much in common with a man's mentality it is tough going to make conversation. However, in my opinion, men are much easier to please than women; they don't dissect you on sight, and if you are fairly attractive they give you the benefit of the doubt—at first, anyway. After that it's up to you.

• • • •

I am not a natural mixer and my timidity makes me mad, especially when I try to force myself to say something pleasant and casual, and my voice either dries up and I gulp, or a hoarse croak (utterly unlike the human voice) grates out some inane remark, and I can just visualize the sickly grin that accompanies it. I want to do something about it, and I try to, but the nightmare is still with me.

• • • •

I'm all right with persons I know; I can talk to them without appearing abysmally dumb, for I'm not dumb, really. I'm well read and guide my social conduct (or try to) by applied psychology and intuition. The only time I ever get into really hot water is when I let myself be guided by other persons and disobey my own instincts. Then I invariably regret it. This is no bid for sympathy, you understand, but simply a request for some of that very valuable advice you gave the other girl. Incidentally, I'm going to cut out and save the advice you gave February 10 to "Wretched Wife." I may be in the same fix one day, and it would come in handy. ALICE.

Concerning Repose.

DEAR ALICE: I don't suppose the person ever lived who, if he cared to subject his every social contact to critical, analytical scrutiny, wouldn't conclude that he had fallen somewhat short of a perfect standard of charm, magnetism, ease and grace in each particular encounter. But, on the other hand, if he was as critical of the other person as he was of himself, he would probably be warranted in reaching the reassuring conclusion that the other fellow had fallen a good deal short of perfection, also.

• • • •

Persons who find themselves tongue tied, awkward, confused, flustered and uneasy in social interchange usually are persons of sensitive awareness who aim too painstakingly at the bull's-eye of complete perfection so far as their own performance is concerned. As Dr. Henry C. Link points out in his book, "The Return to Religion," it is foolishly inhibitory to expect, or to aim at 100 per cent perfection in an undertaking, the first time it is undertaken. Poise and efficiency eventually accrue to the person who has the courage to try while willing to admit the possibility of immediate and perhaps long continued partial failure.

• • • •

When one of your temperament is confronted with the ordeal of a social introduction or with greeting a recently acquired beau, she should bear in mind that this encounter is not the climactic experience of her lifetime, but that it is, rather, merely a passing opportunity for improving her social technique. If things don't go off as beautifully as she would like, what of it? She should remember that her vis-a-vis probably hasn't any more on the ball than she has, either, or that other person would have put her so much at ease that she would have been chattering with the vivacity of a magpie and with the eloquence of a Daniel Webster in no time at all. When you come away from a social encounter hating yourself for your total inadequacy, just remember that the other person was at least partially to blame for the way things turned out. He (or she) lacked poise, tact, courtesy, discernment, kindliness, simplicity and intelligence, or he (or she) would immediately have sensed your distress and would have extended himself to make you feel happy, charming and wholly adequate.

• • • •

It is sheer nervous panic which turns the ordinarily mellow human voice into a hoarse croak, and which distorts a usually pleasant and controlled smile into a sickly grimace. Now, it is a well known scientific fact that nervousness can largely be controlled by proper breathing exercises, and therefore one who suffers as you suffer unquestionably could profit by taking a course in vocal culture, in either public, radio or platform speaking or singing. Either course will teach you much you should know about physical posture, mental poise and voice and breath control.

• • • •

Persons of your temperament usually are egoists, in two senses of the word. You are engrossed with self, for one thing, and you are determined, for another thing, to shine with greater luster than your fellows. You aren't really interested in the other fellow, to the extent of busying yourself with making him really happy and pleased with himself; nor are you content to be accepted as just an average person. You distort yourself out of all proportion trying to be super, rather than normally adequate.

• • • •

When you are introduced to someone, or when you are called upon to greet a recently acquired beau, don't set yourself the task of dazzling the stranger or bewitching the tentative admirer. Slip into your place in the situation modestly, self effacingly, quietly, simply, easily. Say, "How do you do, Mr. Smith," when introduced, and if you feel like smiling, smile. If you don't, let your face remain grave. If you can't think of a word to say, don't try to say one. Be true to your innermost feelings at the moment. If the other person doesn't take the burden of effecting a reasonable social interchange upon himself, and you simply don't feel up to the task of doing it yourself, let the situation ride. Incidentally, it may reassure you to know what a brilliant professional woman of my acquaintance said once.

• • • •

A forthcoming reception was under discussion. She was to be among the guests. She said, "I hope they have a few chairs around. People are always turning their backs on me at receptions." And she is one of the most engagingly natural, conversationally delightful, intellectually able and surpassingly modest persons I have ever known. Yet she hasn't a fund of small talk to purvey to strangers, and has the good common sense not to distort her personality by trying to be a small-talker. She blames neither herself nor others for the deal she gets in regimented, superficial social life. She is not dismayed by the fact that strangers en masse don't take to her. However, I have seen her "discovered" with delight by various persons, whose fascinated attention she held without effort, which merely proves you don't have to tie yourself in knots to be a social success with your own kind.

• • • •

There is a poem, entitled "Waiting," written by John Burroughs, to be found on one of the prefatory fly-leaves of his volume, "The Light of Day," which should be read and re-read by persons of your kind. Some of the lines, as I remember them, go like this: "Awake, asleep, by night or day, the friends I seek are seeking me. No wind can drive their bark astray, nor change the tide of destiny." If you can just remember this, and assiduously develop an increasing genuine, kindly affection for and considerateness of your fellowman and woman, you will find your awkward self-consciousness and social ineptitude falling away like an outworn, outgrown garment. As for the advice given the other girl, which you ask me to repeat, you will find it in The Post of February 3; while suggestions for overcoming self-consciousness and cultivating a pleasantly friendly personality were given in another column early last autumn.

Proper Setting Of Dinner Table Is Important

Bowl of Flowers or Fruit Adds Freshness for Occasion.

By Margaret Wallace

THE etiquette of setting the table for formal and family meals is studied carefully by the efficient housewife or hostess. Not only does the proper "laying of the cloth" and placing of the dishes, flowers, silver, glassware, napkins and so forth on the table in their proper places maintain the standard of refinements of the household but can add or detract from the pleasure of the meal.

The importance of a properly set table in training the children of the family in regard to correct table manners and preserving those of the adult members of the family cannot be over emphasized.

Whether the meal be served in a dinette or in a stately dining room table clothes or place cover are used.

Doily Use Outlined.

In this day of rush and hurry many housewives use individuall place covers or large doilies for almost every meal although properly they are intended for breakfast and luncheon. The thrifty American housewife has learned that there is much saving of laundry bills if these individual covers are used. Some housewives use lace table cloths for dinner even in households rolds where it is not possible to maintain a high order of luxury. Attractive lace table covers that launder well and look well can be had at moderate prices. They have the advantage over linen cloths in that they do not need a silencing cloth underneath and can be rinsed out in a hurry and used without ironing or at least without the laundry labor that has to be expended on a linen cloth.

When a linen table cloth is used, a silencing cloth is a necessity unless the cloth is of the handsome type inset with lace and handwork kindred to a lace table cloth. The table cloth should be placed with great care so that it hangs evenly.

Flowers Important.

Even in the simplest of households, no matter what kind of table cloth or place covers are used, it is possible to have flowers, fresh or artificial, a bowl of fresh or artificial fruit, a growing plant or something of the kind in the center of the table. One housewife uses three candles in low inexpensive holders, representing the three wishes for health, happiness and plenty, the goal of every family. Service or dinner plates should mark the position of each cover. Service plates are used at formal dinners and in the more formal households.

The placing of spoons, forks and knives is easy to remember if the fact that they are arranged from outside in toward the plate in the sequence in which they are to be used. The rule for forks is that they must go to the left of the plate with the exception of the cocktail fork.

Tines Turned Up.

Of course tines are all turned up. Knives go to the right of the plate with the sharp edge toward the plate. Then the spoons should be arranged at the right of the knives. It seems hardly necessary to say it but because sometimes housewives make an error in this the bowls of the spoons must all face upward. At the extreme right of the forks, the cocktail fork should be placed.

Of course the water glass must never be turned down. It should be placed at the tip of the knife. When bread and butter plates are used they should be at tip of the fork. Although some hostesses place the butter spreader by the side of the bread and butter plate it is correct to place it on the plate parallel to the edge of the table.

Napkins may be placed on the service or dinner place, but many hostesses place it to the left of the forks with the open corner at the lower right side.

Claire Tilden Dress Pattern

HAVE YOU been encouraging your young daughter to dress herself? She'll find it ever so easy if you make her this captivating little coat-frock—for its buttoned-front can be fastened quickly and easily by small fingers. And did you ever see princess-lines as graceful as these? Too, they're enhanced by a pair of rounded pockets, and topped by a becoming collar and brief sleeves!

Pattern 478 is cut in children's sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6 requires 2½ yards of 36-inch fabric.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (preferably coins) for this pattern. Write clearly size, name, address and style number.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Betty Grable, hard working motion picture starlet, believes in relaxing in exercise on her days off. Her enthusiasm for the skip-rope explains her perfect figure.

By Ida Jean Kain.

A COMFY couch and an extra soft pillow may be your idea of relaxation when fatigue gets you down, but if you are a housewife or an office worker the scientific way to combat fatigue is with physical activity.

Muscles cramp and nerves become tense in a routine of work and you relax naturally only when the muscles have been put to use. You work hard, but how much exercise do you get in office or housework? Practically none. When you lie down for a few minutes' rest it is hard to really relax. You are much more likely to feel refreshed from a workout on the mat or the floor.

Fatigue, you see, is a poison and it must be carried away by the blood stream. In exercise the blood stream is quickened, which takes the poison away and relieves fatigue just that much more rapidly. That whipped-down feeling is banished most efficiently with exercise balanced with complete relaxation. The next time you feel as if you had got in the path of a herd of stampeding elephants, try this ten-minute fatigue chaser:

Lying on Floor.

Begin by sitting in a chair and bending over in a complete flop. Let the head, arms and hands dangle between the legs, limp as string. Straighten up and flop again. See what a complete flop you can be! The blood rushing to the brain is good for you. Such tactics help relieve mental strain and untie tense nerves.

Now get down on the floor and lie there. Yes, the good, hard floor! It offers more rest than the softest couch because it takes over the job of supporting your bones and gives those tired muscles a real vacation. Just sprawl, naturally. One by one, try to tense your tired muscles and then let them go limp again. You might start with the right wrist, tensing it and then flapping the hand loosely. Then tense the arm, and let it flop. Repeat with the left wrist and arm.

You can take the kinks out of your neck muscles by rolling the head loosely on the shoulders. Yawn a few prodigious yawns.

Continue your relaxing process by raising one leg in the air, and letting it fall limply to the floor. Repeat with the other leg.

Now wriggle the body, stretch from head to toe, and let yourself go limp again. Lie there as if you were about to sink right through the floor. See how little effort you exert.

Helpful Diet Given.

These muscle toning movements cannot be termed exercise, and there is nothing better than stretching for fatigue. Get up on all fours, with arms and legs straight, and raise the right arm and the right leg simultaneously, high in the air. This gets all your muscles! Try the exercise with the left leg and left arm.

Exercise that is fun always affords the best possible relaxation. Over the week-end, go skating, ride a bike, hike, skip rope, or do something that will give you pleasure and exercise combined.

2 egg yolks
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1¼ cups mineral oil

Add the salt to the egg yolks, blend thoroughly. Add the lemon juice. Then add the oil in quantities of a tablespoon or more, being sure that all the oil has completely combined with the egg yolks before more is added. Continue beating all the time with rotary beater. Toward the last larger quantities of the oil may be added at a time. Have all ingredients cold. If a more acid dressing is desired, add more lemon juice or add the juices from sweet pickles.

Use purified mineral oil—heavy oil is best. This oil has no nutritive value and is also laxative.

Oysters With Fresh Mushrooms.

2 tablespoons of butter
2 tablespoons of flour
2 cups of milk
¾ teaspoon of salt
2 cups of chopped fresh mushrooms
2 dozen oysters.

Melt the butter in the skillet. Add the chopped fresh mushrooms, and brown. Add flour and stir well. Add milk slowly and cook until thickened. Season to taste.

Prepare the oysters by heating in two tablespoons of butter until the edges curl. Add salt and pepper. Pour the mushroom sauce over them and serve at once.

Flour Mixtures.

Flour mixtures are divided into four major classifications: Batters, such as popovers, waffles, griddle cakes, muffins, spoon bread, etc.; stiff batters, such as baking powder quick breads, like nut breads and sally luns, etc. Soft doughs include baking powder biscuits, yeast rolls, dumplings and coffee cakes. Stiff doughs are noodles, cookies and pie crusts.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Coming of Spring

Riding downtown on the bus, she suddenly realized that she must do something about her clothes. And the kitchen linoleum. Why spring was virtually here?

Of course, it had been mild all winter, but now there was something else in the air. The olive green of the grass was changing to a brighter hue. The trunks of the trees had somehow lost their dead-black look, and their branches seemed to lift themselves more lightly, flaunting their fringes of buds. In the windows of the small outlying shops, the mannequins stood lightly poised, ready for flight in gay print dresses and jaunty bolero suits and sashes. Millinery store windows were full of straw pill boxes, turbans, and sailors.

Well, she would look around a little at the hats. Not that she would buy this early . . . but by March anyway. Besides, she had better be planning things . . . she would wear her last season's spring coat and maybe buy a lightweight suit that she could wear into summer . . . and then there was George . . . he really ought to get a good blue serge for Sunday—if they could manage . . . and Buddie and Sister would need complete new outfits . . . and she had counted on getting that new linoleum for the kitchen . . .

Yes, she must plan it all out. She started to reach in her handbag for pencil and paper—no, she would wait until she got home, people always stared so. She settled back in her seat and looked out the window. A drug store sign told of a new spring tonic . . . a florist shop window was alive with yellow jonquils.

She felt gay and excited . . . as if something mysterious were just about to happen. Spring was coming . . . Things some way were going to be different. Yes, that was what the fortune teller had said in the tearoom . . . a change ahead! After all, maybe she had better not plan on that linoleum—you could never tell what might happen in the spring.

Why they might move! One ought never to be too certain about houses—even after being in the same one 13 years. They might buy a little place out in Maryland or Virginia, as they were always talking of doing, or—why they might even have to move to another city! George might be transferred! Or someone might offer him a better job!

It would be nice to go to some place different . . . like Atlanta . . . or maybe the Far West . . . like San Francisco . . . or even Chicago. Well, if George got nothing more than a promotion here, it would be nice to have a little more money and not have to scrimp so when the insurance had to be paid . . . and then maybe they could trade in their old car . . . and perhaps drive up to Canada on George's vacation . . . none of them had ever seen Niagara Falls.

She stopped suddenly and smiled to herself. Why—why should anything happen this spring? It never had . . . not in 15 years . . . except the children's coming. Just the same old round of cooking and dish washing and paying the monthly bills—no, she must not think that way. Anyway, she was glad she didn't live in California or Florida where there was nothing to look forward to—at least in the weather. Besides, if she got a new suit . . . and the new linoleum . . . and some new slip covers . . .

As she left the bus, a chill gust of wind swept against her, causing her to tighten her coat collar, then it subsided into a gentle breeze. She stopped and sniffed the air expectantly. Yes, it was there! That same, intangible something that always came on mild February days—and coolish August ones. How she loved it—this first delicate caress of the new season, like the first kiss of a new and shy lover.

Again, she felt strangely thrilled and excited. A sense of impending adventure possessed her. Yes, spring was coming! And who could tell what might happen in the spring?

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Feb. 11.

THIS is the time of year when the northern districts get madly flower-conscious—the colder and meaner the weather, the more posy minded we go. At this very moment many of the bigger and better Fifth avenue shoppeys have blooms in their front windows—artificial, perhaps, but the new false flowers are so perfect that they even seem to smell elegant.

ALICE HUGHES.

The bloom boom has recently received a hearty nudge by the presence of Mrs. Constance Spry, Britain's famous flower-fixer, who has been lecturing to our garden clubs on her speciality. I lunched with her in the Ritz garden in Paris last August, and found her to be a sedate and quiet lady, much perturbed at her coming American tour because she, like so many foreign sit-by-the fires, considered Americans to be a curious and faintly barbaric lot. But she has emerged from her fit of genteel buck- is now telling us all abo

Mrs. gest publicity edge has be rk among the blos- soms o royal family. She has do decorations for the royal l of Kent and Glou- cester the same business for the of Wallis Simpson and h t the Chateau de Cande elps, but she's a charmi teresting orator on her ow given a few cute tips on making the posies fit the room. For instance, she insists on flowers with character. And she is a booster for massing them in solid colors, especially sweet peas and tulips.

Other tips from Mme. Spry. Green and white for a hot summer room. A quiet room should have a blaze of red flowers on the mantel piece. White flowers and black berries for a black and white room. All this fascinated me, as a horticulturist who knows only the gardenia and camellia when the old gentleman goes moony and generous. I'm tempted to take up forsythia and freesia!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The People Who Really Matter (on the society pages, anyhow) are all dithery about the reported engagement of Walter Chrysler, jr., son of the motor monarch, and Peggy Sykes, a pretty post-deb. Young Walter has always been known as the booksy sort, and did some fancy publishing at one time. And he will be the first of his tribe to marry into a "social" clan. His pretty sisters made nice and happy marriages, but not strictly top-hat. Thelma wed Byron Foy, who began as a motor salesman, and Bernice's choice, Edgar Garbisch, was a West Point football hero. But Walter goes top-drawer.

Buttons Are Assuming Increasing Importance

Paris (AP).—Buttons are almost as important as the lines of clothes these days, and they appear on garments where they have never been before; studded closely on the waist so that the material underneath cannot be seen; strung on eight-inch wide belts extending to the hips; sewn on hems gleaming with their glitter.

Buttons in the shapes of anchors, fishhooks, stockinged ski shoes, tennis balls and crossed golf sticks trim sports clothes. Two miniature caddies trim the pockets of a three-piece golf suit.

Hatpins Reappear On Ladies' Latest

New York (AP).—Men will think women's hat styles are right back where they were last generation, for behold, the hat pin is here again!

Hat pins like those which adorned the feminine cranium in the horse and buggy days appeared on some new spring bonnets shown recently to 1,500 fashion experts.

The 1938 hat pin is a little fancier, however, than the old-time ball-headed ones. Some new ones are topped with clustered rhinestones or made of carved glass.

Other hat style notes from the show, presented under auspices of the millinery stabilization commission:

"Gibson Girl" hats are back.

Flowers are fashionable. So are veils. So are chin-straps.

Vice President and Mrs. Garner Give Brilliant Party To Renew Custom of Annual Dinner for the President

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Back into the social picture with a bang-up party that WAS a party came the Vice President's dinner for the President last night. Last year, it bowed out of the calendar when the Chief Executive and his Number One Assistant got together and decided the schedule was heavy enough without their annual exchange of dinners.

This season, however, it went on the boards as in former years, and more than 50 lucky guests are glad it did. Besides the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Cabinet members, the House and Senate majority and minority leaders, Governors from two States, and several other "big names" were in the crowd enjoying one of the best parties of the year.

HOPE R. MILLER.

With Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Authors and Composers, as master of ceremonies, and a flock of top-flight entertainers down from New York to keep the event moving merrily along, men forgot their stiff shirts and their gates-ajar collars, and women forgot they were Important People dining out with the Vice President. In other words, by the time the show started the whole party had settled down to enjoy itself, as Gene Buck expressed it, "in a thoroughly homespun fashion."

Informality and good fun were keynotes of the event from first to last, and anybody who believes the Vice President doesn't enjoy a good party just doesn't know his Vice President. Mr. Buck, who met Mr. Garner more than a score of years ago, can tell you, and will, that "there's nobody who enjoys partying more than Jack Garner—provided, of course, the event can be human, natural and strictly informal." In all three respects, it was, last night.

Rose Room Is Scene of Dinner

As would be expected, however, the usual amenities of formal dining were observed as guests gathered around the long table in the Rose Room of the Washington Hotel. Seats were doled out strictly according to rank, and the dinner moved along from soup to salad, and from salad to coffee without a hitch in the procedure. But later, when the company drifted out, one and all, to the sun parlor where the program took place, everybody from the President and Mrs. Roosevelt to Gene Buck's 14-year-old son, George Buck, relaxed . . got into the spirit of the thing . . . and knew they were in for a rare evening's entertainment.

"You're just sittin' around in the parlor . . . waitin' for somethin' to happen," suggested the inimitable Mr. Buck. "Just imagine you're down in Texas." Then there was Corina Mura, pretty Texas-born girl who sang and played the guitar, and took her whole audience right out to the plains for a breathing spell.

Then came Joseph Duninger, the "mentalist," one of the leading exponents of clairvoyance. He "read minds" right and left and had some of the guests hoping and praying he wouldn't "tell all" before he was through. The President particularly enjoyed Mr. Duninger's part on the program. He clapped louder than anybody when the act was finished.

Jack Major, "a different type of comedian," who was discovered down in Paducah, Kentucky, by Irvin S. Cobb, whistled, told some of his tall tales, and then whistled some more. He made a hit with everybody. Jules Lande, of the Hotel St. Regis in New York, played a group of violin solos "in the modern manner" and left the guests shouting for "More! More!" when he finished. Performing for America's President was nothing new for Mr. Lande. He had experience at the White House when Harding was President.

Leo Le Fleur, pianist, rippled off some gay tunes, and John Upman, baritone, sang ballads and other familiar airs. Harry Sharpe was accompanist for Miss Mura and Mr. Major, and the entire program moved along with dash and sparkle. The Vice President and Mrs. Garner proved once more that though they entertain infrequently, they can give a party as good, if not better, than any other couple in town.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson Among the Guests

On the list of guests—in addition to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. William B. Bankhead, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull; the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings; the Postmaster General, James A. Farley, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, the Secretary of the Interior, Harold L. Ickes, and the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper.

Frank Murphy, Governor of Michigan was there, arriving with his sister, Mrs. G. R. Teahan. Also, the Governor of Texas and Mrs. James V. Allred. In previous years, both Senators from Mr. Garner's home State have also been present, but both were missing last night. If the rumor is true that Mr. Allred plans to run for the Senate maybe it was just as well not to have his future adversary breaking bread with him last night.

Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary and Mrs. McNary were there; also the Senate Majority Leader, Alben W. Barkley and Mrs. Barkley. Representative Sam Rayburn, House Majority Leader and a Texan to boot, was also present; as was the House Minority Leader, Bertrand H. Snell, who was accompanied by Mrs. Snell.

Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt were among the guests; also Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Mrs. Jones; Capt. and Mrs. Walter Woodson, Col. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson and Col. Oliver S. Wood; Dr. and Mrs. George W. Calver; Howard Chandler Christy, the noted artist, and Mrs. Christy; Mr. and Mrs. Silliman Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Murrell L. Buckner.

By Elizabeth Ford.

Not even lights that failed at the Chinese Embassy could stop the party there yesterday afternoon, given in honor of Bishop Yu-Pin, of Nanking. The rambling house, snowed under by a last-minute flurry of winter, actually gained in atmosphere as tall candles suddenly appeared in strategic corners in lieu of everyday electricity. Conversations, cut off for an instant by the darkness, rushed on after a second's lull more fluently than ever. Even departing guests gave up trying to find their coat checks and decided to stay on longer. "Why, it's nicer still with the candles!" was the concensus of opinion on every side.

Receiving in the library were the Chinese Ambassador, his daughter, Miss Yoeh E. Wang, in a black brocade dress with a cluster of white gardenias at her shoulder; towering and cordial Bishop Yu-Pin; and Miss Hilda Yen, who will soon leave for China.

Many Assist At Tea Table

It seemed as if at least half of Washington were presiding at the tea table, decorated with white snapdragons and red carnations . . . and where for the asking you could have your choice of black tea or green tea according to your mood. Told that most Americans preferred the green variety, many of the guests insisted on trying the black kind . . . "at least this time, anyway."

Among the ladies who poured were Mrs. Mark Bristol, whose small black hat was trimmed with a veil; the Spanish Ambassador's wife, Senora de los Rios in a black dress, the bodice of which was of black lace; the Soviet Ambassador's wife, Mmt. Troyanovsky, also in black; Mrs. Ralph William Close, wife of the Minister of South Africa; Mrs. Sol Bloom and Mrs. Daniel B. Devore, wife of Brig. Gen. Devore.

Serving at the punch bowl in the drawing room just off the library where the guests were received, were Miss Lois Ing, daughter of the Counsellor of the Embassy and Mme. Zaung Teh Ing, looking very spring like in spite of the winterish day in light blue and flowered silk; and Mrs. Jen Chao Shieh, wife of the attache. Not in the official receiving line, but busily greeting newcomers as they moved through the rooms, was Miss An-Hsiu Wang, youngest daughter of the Chinese Ambassador. In contrast to Miss Yoeh E. Wang, she had chosen a dress of deep mulberry-colored silk.

Among those who arrived at every tick of the clock, were the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza who were accompanied by Senora Mercedes Alfonseca, niece of Senora de Pastoriza, and Andres Pastoriza, jr.; Miss Vera Bloom, Mme. van Haersma de With; and the Bulgarian Minister, Dimitri Naoumoff, bachelor for an afternoon, as Mme. Naoumoff was receiving friends at home.

Also present were the Soviet Ambassador, Alexander Troyanovsky; the Minister of South Africa, Ralph William Close; and the Minister of Ecuador, Capitan Colon Elroy Alfaro, shunning hat and overcoat because, as he said, he likes winter weather and is trying to enjoy as much of it as possible before summer sets in.

Then there was Senora de Campbell, wife of the Commercial Attache of the Chilean Embassy, who was accompanied by her daughter, Senorita Eleanor de Campbell. Still others were Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock in black with which she wore a pearl necklace; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke; and the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera. They were accompanied by their daughter, Senorita Erma Castillo Najera, who wore a fetching pillbox bonnet of bright green.

Bristols Give Fete For Mrs. Moore and The Oliver Posfays

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol entertained at an informal dinner last evening in honor of their house guest, Mrs. Ballard Moore, and Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Posfay.

Mrs. Moore, who has been in Washington about a week, will return to her home in Chicago today. The Posfays will leave on Monday for a visit of about two weeks in North Carolina and then will return again to Washington to spend more time here.

Mrs. Posfay is the former Mrs. Walter Andrews, and has, for some years, been living abroad. She and Mr. Posfay have recently been residing in Brussels and before that made their home in Italy.

Polish Envoy Leaves.

The Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, left last evening for a vacation in Florida and Havana. He will return to Washington near the end of the month.

Myers Are Hosts To Pallavicinis

Among those who entertained before the Friday Evening Supper Club at the Sulgrave last evening were Mr. and Mrs. Studley Myers, whose guests were Signor and Signora Allesandro Pallavicini. The Pallavicinis are visiting the Myerses. Signora Pallavicini is the former Miss Margaret Roosevelt, daughter of George Enlen Roosevelt.

Mr. and Mrs. Myers will entertain at dinner for the Pallavicinis again tonight—before the Thrift Shop Ball. Other guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Stratford, Mr. and Mrs. Jean de Sibour and Allen Walker.

Others attending the Friday Evening Supper Club were Miss Nancy Harrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Harrison, and her fiance, Eugene Franklin O'Connor, son of Judge and Mrs. Eugene O'Connor. With them were Miss Fifi O'Connor, sister of the bridegroom, and maid of honor for the wedding to take place today, and Barry Mohun, best man.

Helen Morgan To Sing at Ball

Helen Morgan will come to the Thrift Shop Valentine Ball at Sulgrave Club tonight to sing "My Bill," and other of her famous song hits as headliner on the program of entertainment, which will get under way promptly after Mrs. Roosevelt's arrival at the party.

In addition there will be many games to entertain the guests—and their dollars. Miss Mary Wells and Miss Cassie Johnson will preside over a booth, where comic Valentines may be purchased and mailed—direct from the ball.

The ballroom and adjoining rooms at Sulgrave will be hung with smilax, red hearts and any number of amusing signs directing guests to their favorite sport. Whether it be trying their skill with darts aimed at the bull's-eye in a huge red heart, tossing pennies in a saucer floating in a tub of water, or taking a chance on a grab-bag, there will be pretty girls to help out.

Supper will be at 12, with dancing into the early morning hours to one of the town's favorite orchestras, in Valentine attire.

Mrs. Roosevelt Entertains 51 At Luncheon

Mme. Troyanovsky Heads Diplomatic, Cabinet and Official Guests.

At her second big luncheon this week Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday entertained 51 guests. Ten diplomatic hostesses, two Cabinet wives, and a number of Congressional wives were at the long table, decorated with pink snapdragons and carnations, freesia and maidenhair fern.

Mme. Alexander Troyanovsky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, headed the list of guests. Others there included Senora de los Rios, wife of the Spanish Ambassador; Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State; Mme. Edgar Prochnik, wife of the Austrian Minister; Mrs. Michael MacWhite, wife of the Minister of the Irish Free State; Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Minister; Senora de Lopez, wife of the Minister of Colombia; Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Dominican Minister; Senora de Castro Beeche, wife of the Costa Rican Minister; Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister, Senora de Bayle, and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce.

Mrs. Sheppard Heads Senate Wives

Mrs. Morris Sheppard, wife of Senator Sheppard, of Texas, was among honor guests; also Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wife of Senator Lewis, of Illinois; Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys, wife of Senator Van Nuys, of Indiana; Mrs. Harry S. Truman, wife of Senator Truman of Missouri; Mrs. James H. Hughes, wife of Senator Hughes, of Delaware.

Five wives of Representatives were in the party, including Mrs. Abe Murdock, Mrs. Frank J. G. Dorsey, Mrs. John M. Houston, Mrs. Henry C. Luckey, and Mrs. Lyle H. Boren. Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss was there; also, Dr. Janes Clark, Mrs. Henry A. Dodderidge, Miss Grace Guest, Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris, Dr. Marguerite Hertz, Mrs. Katherine M. Hickson, Mrs. John Ihlder, Mrs. Bernard B. Jones.

Lady Lister Kaye Is Among Guests

Lady Lister Kaye, who arrived in Washington not long ago from her home in England, was present; also, Miss Mary McCandlish, Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, Mrs. Charles B. McVay, Miss Jennie Moore, Mrs. W. B. Murphy, Mrs. Carleton Palmer, Miss Thelma Parkinson, Mrs. I. T. Quinn, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the United States Mint, and Mrs. Richard Southgate.

Dean Adele H. Stamp, of the University of Maryland, was among the guests, as was Mrs. Margaret M. Sullivan, Mrs. John V. Summerlin, Mrs. Frederick H. Warren, Mrs. Charles Whitman and Mrs. David L. Wing, of New York, Miss Mary Winslow of Boston, Mrs. Malvina T. Sheider and Mrs. James M. Helm.

E. C. Morans, Jr., Hosts at Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Moran, jr., entertained at dinner last night in their residence on Thirty-second street. Lobster from the Maine coast, sent down especially for the function, was a feature of the menu. Both the host and hostess are natives of Maine, and Mr. Moran formerly was a Representative from that State. He is now a member of the United States Maritime Commission.

Spring flowers—iris, jonquils and yellow roses—were used as decorations in the drawing room and as a center-piece for the dining room table, where covers were laid for 10. The hostess wore a frock of peach chiffon, fashioned on simple lines.

Guests were Senator Frederick Hale, of Maine; Senator and Mrs. Edward Burke, of Nebraska; Senator and Mrs. Lewis B. Schwellenbach, of Washington, Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Gruening and Miss Alice Barrows.

Local Society Helps Celebrate Good Fortune of Egyptian King

King Farouk I of Egypt was "the man of the hour" yesterday for a large section of Washington society who called at the Egyptian Legation between 5 and 7 o'clock, by way of celebrating both his birthday and his recent marriage to the lovely Farida.

Invitations, handsomely engraved and carefully worded, went out weeks ago under the name of retiring Charge d'Affaires, Waguih Rostum, who was called home before the party. In his place, to receive the long line of guests, was the newly arrived charge d'affaires, Houssein Mahmoud Radi, who negotiated the business of being a host in a masterly fashion.

While Mohammed Youssef Bey was minister, this annual reception was considered one of the outstanding events of the season, attended with enthusiasm by scores of official and residential Washingtonians. The Youssef tradition was still in evidence yesterday as champagne glasses were raised to toast the king; as guests by dozens poured into the handsome hallway of the legation, filed up the red-carpeted steps and into the dining room, where a long table was lavishly spread. Downstairs, there was dancing in the ballroom, under the soft light of Oriental lamps, where a bar was set up, and drinks of all kinds poured freely for well over two hours.

Many Notables . . Glimpsed in Crowd

Among those who passed the colorful Egyptian frieze in the vestibule of the legation and mounted the stairs to greet their host were Postmaster James Farley, Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Roberts . . . the latter one of the most popular young ladies in the ballroom and Senora de los Rios, wife of the Spanish Ambassador, who hastened from the Chinese Embassy, where she had assisted at tea earlier in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Wade Hampton Ellis were in the crowd; also Mrs. Mark Conrad, who said her granddaughter, Miss Virginia Bacon Penfield, New York debutante of this season probably would be down to Washington this spring; Col. and Mrs. Consuelo A. Leone seeming to know everyone there; J. Crawford Biggs, Mrs. Louis Caldwell, Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, Miss Joan Lueddemann, niece of Senator and Mrs. William E. Borah, and Princess Stephanie Bolgorousky.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Jais of New York were also present. Mrs. Jais, better known as Regina Jais, writer of travel books is a past-master at sky-gardening . . . she grows a full-fledged corn crop in a pent house garden every summer. They are in Washington, where they come every year to spend her birthday.

Senator William King was among later arrivals; also the Minister of Finland and Mme. Eero Jarnefelt. Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose O'Connell with their daughter were also among guests as were Mrs. Russell Bennet, Hector Diaz Leguizamon, of the Argentine Embassy; Dr. and Frau Hans Thomsen of the German Embassy; J. M. K. Vyvyan of the British Embassy; Baroness von Below, wearing a wide-brimmed hat instead of her usual Queen Mary turban; Miss Anne Mahoney, daughter of the First Secretary of the Canadian Legation; the former U. S. Minister to Venezuela and Mrs. Preston McGoodwin; Senora de Sueyro, wife of the Argentine Naval Attache; Mercea Victor Babes, Charge d'Affaires of the Rumanian Legation, who arrived without his wife, who is in New York, the Minister of Siam and Mme. Abhibal Rajamaitri; the Turkish Ambassador, Mehmet Munir Ertegun and the First Secretary of the Turkish Embassy, Resid Anamur.

Diplomats There In Full Force

Chatting with Nora van Haersma de With, daughter of the Netherlands Minister, was the Marchese Benedetto Capomazza, of the Italian Embassy, while nearby the Counselor of the Spanish Embassy, Dr. Enrique Carlos de La Casa, was telling Sophocles Papas that he had been Minister to Albanala, native land of the musician. Another member of the Spanish Embassy staff there was First Secretary Antonio Garcia Lahiguera.

Chile Embassy Scene of Dance Of Younger Set

The Chilean Embassy was the brilliant setting for a small dance last night when the Chilean Ambassador and the Misses Marta and Rebeca Trucco entertained in honor of his other daughter, Miss Graciela Trucco, and her fiance, Fernando Illanes Benitez, Secretary of the Embassy. The event was one of the last of the many parties for the engaged couple, whose wedding will take place next Friday afternoon.

The Ambassador and the guests of honor received in the drawing room, while the dancing was chiefly confined to the large center hall, decorated for the occasion with pink gladioli and ferns. The dance was composed entirely of the young set, including a few young married couples, diplomatic bachelors and members of the embassy staff.

Honoree Gowned . . In White Satin

Miss Graciela Trucco, a brunette, was gowned in white satin, while her sister, Marta, wore a turquois chiffon dress, and Rebeca a frock of white lace. Miss Olga Patterson, who has been visiting at the Chilean Embassy this winter, was gowned in black lace, and all four girls wore beautiful corsages.

From 11 o'clock on, guests arrived. Among them were Prince Del Drago, Marquese Cappomazza and Count and Countess Roberti, of the Italian Embassy; Frau Scholz in a stunning cherry red satin gown; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Blankenhorn, of the German Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Schlatter, of the Swiss Legation, the latter in black taffeta, and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Walravens, of the Belgian Embassy.

Among some of the young Washingtonians there were Mr. and Mrs. Millard West, Mr. and Mrs. Merton English, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bonsal, Mr. and Mrs. William Powell, Miss Evelyn Walker in emerald green chiffon; Miss Dolly Corbin in a black velvet gown with a many-shaded red sash and wearing carnations in her hair; William Keane Ryan, Henry Bell Gwynn and Robert Knowlton.

Several Dinners Precede Dances

Several small dinner parties were given before the dance, including Prince Del Drago's and the Misses Jane and Junia Culbertson's. Jane, who wore rose-printed brocade, and Junia, a black taffeta dress trimmed in light blue velvet, were entertaining two out-of-town guests, John Lovitt, from Philadelphia, and Frank Luther, from Chicago, who are spending the week-end here.

A number of the guests left their parties at the Sulgrave Supper Club dance to have a whirl at the Trucco party. Among these were Miss Stellita Stapleton, who had been to Miss Frances Andrews' dinner at the Alibi Club and who wore a gold lace gown, the only trimming being an old South American necklace of emeralds and platinum. One of the most attractive dresses was the red and blue print worn by Miss Fina Tudela, who arrived with Carlos Zevallos, Secretary of the Peruvian Embassy.

Delinquency Plea Made to Civic Forum

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

A law with teeth in it for adults involved in the case of a delinquent child, and educational facilities for meeting the need of children more fitted for work with their hands than with their heads were advocated last night by Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Women's Bureau of the Police Department and Lieut. John Edward Scott, director of the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs. The two police officials spoke at the second of the series of forums on the reorganization of the city government, being sponsored by the civics committee of the Women's City Club. Miss Etta Mai Russell, Juvenile Court worker for the Federated Churchwomen, who was to have been on the program, was unable to be present.

The "crime wave" which is receiving so much attention this winter is the usual pocketbook-snatching epidemic familiar to the police at this season, Capt. Milliken asserted. She cited the conditions of poverty and distress which contribute to crime in the District and asserted it was amazing there was not more crime rather than that there was so much. Money must be spent either in measures for preventing it or on means of apprehending law violators and institutions to house them, she said, and the former is a far more practical investment than the latter.

She told of a small boy brought to the Women's Bureau by his mother, who had found him on the street after he had been gone from home three days. The child had a revolver in his pocket, one of two he had found at the home of another child in the neighborhood. He had sold one of the guns and had expected to sell the other.

"The thing that concerns me in this case," declared Captain Milliken, "is the difficulty in prosecuting the man who bought the gun from that child."

The law provides that an adult found guilty of contributing to the delinquency of a child who has twice been brought into court may, upon conviction, be fined $50, she explained . . . a provision which lets the child "get into plenty of trouble and the adult, who was chiefly to blame, off easy."

She told of another case in which a girl of 17, because of her environment, had launched on a career of crime and was likely to be sent to the workhouse where she would be associated with older women criminals. Nothing constructive will be done for her while she is thtre and when she is released, she will be more of a liability to society than she is now, Captain Millikan pointed out. If there had been funds available to provide protective measures for the children of such a family as that from which the girl came, they could be steered into a different kind of life, she said.

Lieut. Scott, whose activity as director of the Boys' Clubs represents one phase of the crime prevention work being carried on, emphasized the importance of giving children the kind of training they need in vocational work.

"Common sense and education have nothing in common," he declared. "The present educational system does not approach the need intelligently and give the below average child the training which will fit him to be a useful citizen."

He expressed the hope there would some day be a boys' club in every precinct in the city and described the work being carried on by those which have been established in the last four years. One of their services is to provide the boys with showers. Hundreds take advantage of the opportunity every week he said—boys whose homes do not offer hot water for bathing.

They are allowed to choose their activity in the clubs and follow their particular bent, he said. Art supplies are in great demand and some of the boys are producing pictures indicating real talent. There are various sports, books, radios, and the boys' club band. "They are allowed to do whatever they want, so long as it is not wrong," said Lieut. Scott, "and we teach them fair play and good sportsmanship so far as we are able."

Capt. Millikin, answering the frequent question as to why there were not girls' clubs, explained that girls do not respond as do boys to mass activity. Boys have the gang spirit which girls do not and therefore the same solution does not work for both. Her talk was the third she had made yesterday, incidentally, the others being before the George Washington University Faculty Club and the Young Mothers' Club of Bethesda.

Mrs. Louise T. Lazelle, chairman of the civics committee, presided at the meeting and there was an interesttd group of club members and their friends present despite the bad weather.

Next week the meeting will be on Thursday night instead of Friday.

Miss Andrews Entertains Guests Aver Wek-End

Miss Frances Andrews, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus Andrews, has as guests this week end, the Misses Jane and Helen Watson, of New York City.

Miss Jane Watson was Miss Andrews' classmate at Ethel Walker School and Miss Helen Watson is now a student at Vassar.

Lieut. John Edward Scott, left, director of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Clubs, and Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Women's Bureau of the Police Department, seated next to him, spoke last night at the second of the series of forums on civic problems, sponsored by the Civics committee of the club. Mrs. Louise T. Lazelle, chairman of the commitee is shown next to Capt. Milliken, with Mrs. Gladys M. Middlemiss, acting president of the club, at the right.

State Societies Plan Dances To Celebrate Valentine's Day

Valentine's Day seems to be responsible for a crowded calendar of parties planned for the week ahead by the State societies. New York leads off tonight with a Valentine ball and entertainment at the Shoreham Hotel from 10 to 1 o'clock.

The receiving line will be headed by Jamer E. Black, president of the society. Mrs. Grace E. Strait, chairman of the reception committee, assisted by Mrs. J. H. Conger and Mrs. Hyla Carlisle, will present new members. There will be a grand march at 11 o'clock when Valentine favors will be distributed to the guests.

The Oregon Society has chosen Valentine's Day for its sixth annual dinner commemorating the admission of the State into the Union, February 14, 1859. This will be at the Shoreham also. Representative James W. Mott will act as toastmaster and Senator Reames is among members of the congressional delegation invited to attend.

John W. Kendall is chairman of the annual dinner, assisted by Ben S. Fisher, Mrs. Elmer E. Hall, Mrs. James T. Jardine and Miss Pherne Miller. Donald C. Beeler is president of the society.

The New Jersey Society, most recent of those organized by the State groups, is having a congressional reception in the Rose Room of the Washington Hotel Wednesday night. Col. J. P. Kelley will make the introductions, assisted by Kurt F. Blady and Harry C. Creamer, vice presidents.

The Alabamans also are entertaining on Wednesday, with a dance at the Willard from 9 to 1. Features of the program will be the showing of slides of the famous Bellingrath Gardens of Mobile and humorous readings by Mrs. J. A. Clohessy. R. Lee Barnes, president of the society, and Mrs. Barnes will act as official hosts. Among the guests will be Senator and Mrs. John H. Bankhead, Senator and Mrs. Lister Hill and other members of the congressional delegation.

The third State society party scheduled for Wednesday is that of the Illinois group. A reception for the congressional delegation and other officials will be given in the West ballroom of the Shoreham. Prizes including a State flag will be given the congressional district having the largest representation. Miss Marjorie De La Mater is chairman of arrangements with Mrs. Alice Cameron in charge of the program.

The West Virginia Society is observing a military night Thursday with a dance at the Raleigh Hotel for officers and enlisted men in all branches of the service. General Mason M. Patrick and Mrs. Patrick and Commander Felix B. Stump are among those who will be guests of honor. David S. Davison is president of the society.

The annual formal Valentine dance of the Massachusetts Society also is set for Thursday in the main ballroom of the Wardman Park Hotel, with Miss Alva Tyler as chairman. The Massachusetts Town Meeting Club will have its bi-monthly session Monday night and its baked bean supper Saturday.

Friday evening, the Georgia Society will have a dance, preceded by a concert by the Emory Glee Club, of Atlanta, at the Shoreham. The concert is to be at 8 o'clock and the dance at 9:30.

Saturday night to round out the week, the North Carolina Society, of which Giles Yoemans Newton is president, will have its annual Valentine party at the Shoreham. Mrs. W. Ney Evans is chairman of the women's committee, assisted by Mrs. Robert H. McNeill. Gen. Albert L. Cox is chairman of the floor committee.

Deserting the Valentine theme, the State societies will devote themselves to celebrating George Washington's birthday the following week. The Virginia Society is planning the most elaborate of the affairs with a ball and pageant depicting the ratification of the Constitution, February 21, in the Willard Hotel ballroom.

The next night, the Iowa Society will entertain at the Shoreham in honor of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps officers who are "native sons," with Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of Naval Operations, and Maj. Gen. George A. Lynch as special guests. Square dances, a minuet and the big apple will be on the program. Senator Guy Gillette is president of the society, Miss Gertrude M. Louis, of the Roosevelt Hotel, the stcretary, is in charge of reservations.

Another party on February 22 will be that of the Washington State and Alaska Society, which will have its annual banquet at the Mayflower Hotel at 7 o'clock.

In making the announcement Representative Martin F. Smith, who heads the society, pointed out that the State of Washington not only has the honor of being named for the first President of the United States, but is the only State named for a President; and that it will shortly enter its golden jubilee year.

Reservations for the banquet are now being received by the secretary, Miss Ruby L. Bakken, of Cathedral Mansions North. All former residents of the Pacific Northwest are invited.

Earl R. Jones, chairman of the social committee, is in charge of arrangements, assisted by Miss Delia Bogue, in charge of program; Miss Mabel Dickson, patrons and patronesses; Mrs. Lloyd A. Nelson, membership, and William P. Taylor, door.

Mrs. Gordon Edmonds, president of the Kentucky State Society, has appointed Fonnie Black Ladd as director of the fancy dress ball to be given the evening of February 28 at the Willard Hotel. The theme of the occasion will be a "world cruise ship party" and was suggested by Mrs. A. O. Stanley, jr., a member of the committee.

Gen. Allen Gullion, judge advocate general of the Army, will design and lead the grand march, and the king and queen of the event will be selected by lot from the costumed dancers. Entertainment for the coronation will include a native Hawaiian dance and a Hindu juggling act. Foreign songs will be played for dancing.

Lincoln G. A. R. Women To Give Memorial Wreath

Abraham Lincoln Circle, Ladies of the G. A. R., of which Mrs. Sara E. Deeds is president, will provide the department wreath to be placed at noon today at the Lincoln Memorial in the annual Lincoln's Birthday celebration. Members of the circle will also attend exercises tonight at the First Congregational Church.

Miss Rebecca L. Blaine, a member of the circle, has been elected department senior vice president, and Mrs. Alice C. Howard, another member, has been re-elected department treasurer.

Bruce Barton Talks to Club

Katharine Dayton Also Drops In From Rehearsal for Tea Party.

Members of the Congressional Club enjoyed a "double bill" yesterday afternoon at their Friday tea and program. They heard Representative Bruce Barton, who was the announced speaker, and Katherine Dayton, who came between rehearsals.

Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, president of the club, opened the meeting and Mrs. Ralph Church, chairman of program, presented Representative Barton. She introduced him as "a man of letters and action, not as a member of Congress."

He spoke as a philosopher rather than as a politician and dealt chiefly in reminiscences, ranging from literature to economics.

This country needs to turn aside from judging success on the basis of economic gains, he said and pointed to the fact that the men who have influenced the world and turned the tide of affairs into new channels have been those who gave, not those who received. He quoted from a personal interview with H. G. Wells, in which the author illustrated this, naming the six greateest men of history, with Jesus Christ the first among all leaders.

Miss Dayton, hurrying in from one rehearsal and back in time for another, likened play-writing to politics. "In both you work with raw materials," she said," people tell you what they think of you, and when you're through, you're through and you know it the next mcrning."

Mrs. George H. Mahon, Mrs. P. B. Parks, Mrs. Cleveland A. Newton and Mrs. Francis G. Newlands presided at the tea table and Mrs. Richard N. Elliott, Mrs. C. C. Dowell and Mrs. J. Rowland Kinzer were on the hospitality committee.

University Club to Give Valentine Dance Tonight

The University Club will entertain with a St. Valentine's dance tonight. Dinner will be served at 8:30 and dancing will follow at 9:30. The affair has been arranged by the club's entertainment committee—Dean Hill Stanley, Edward M. Becker, Allen Gartner, William R. Vallance and Cecil J. Wilkinson.

ONE of the D. A. R. chapter birthday parties held this week was that of Mary Washington Chapter—the first organized in the District and known as the "mother of chapters." It celebrated its forty-sixth anniversary Tuesday night at the Washington Club—though, as its regent, Miss Janet Richards, explained, it was really only the eleventh, the chapter having been born on February 29, in a leap year of the '90s.

After a brief business meeting, the members and guests were formally received by Miss Richards, assisted by the State vice regent, Miss Lillian Chenoweth; the chapter vice regent, Mrs. Elliott Haag, and four former chapter regents, Mrs. F. T. F. Johnson, Mrs. Edward A. Keys, Mrs. Gwynn Gardiner, and Mrs. Thaddeus Jones. Introductions were made by Miss Mary Virginia Williams, chairman of the junior group.

Mrs. Edward A. Keys was chairman of the program, which opened with a processional played by Mrs. Frank B. King for the entry of the junior group, which led a salute to The Flag. Senator David I. Walsh was the guest speaker of the evening, discussing the sacred obligation of preserving our democracy.

Miss Richards followed Senator Walsh with her annual review of the organization and early history of the D. A. R., concerning which she is a recognized authority, being charter member 133, and first recording secretary of the Mary Washington Chapter. The program also included violin selections by Mrs. Margaret Richardson, accompanied by Mrs. Nelson Sayres.

The guests were then invited to the dining room for the cutting of the birthday cake by the regent. Coffee and ices were served by Mrs. Russell Harrison, Mrs. Margaret Scully Zimmele, Mrs. Gwynn Gardiner and Mrs. Thaddeus Jones.

Initiates Fete Sorority Today

Those acting as hostesses are Miss Ann Goodwin, Miss Helen Harding, Miss Edna Davis, Miss Margaret O'Neill and Mrs. Harriet Esch.

Phi Delta Gamma is a sorority of graduate women, and Alpha Chapter is located at the Graduate School of American University.

The "barn party" luncheon planned by Xi Chapter, Iota Tau Tau, national legal sorority, for the rushees of National University, will be held today at 1:30 p. m., at the home of Miss Sylvia Kessler, 6310 Sixteenth street northwest. A novel entertainment has been planned by the committee in charge of arrangements.

The twentieth annual Founders' Day celebration of the Beta Chi National Sorority was held yesterday in the Dragon Room of the Wardman Park Hotel. The celebration was a twilight tea from 7 until 9, with dancing from 10 until 1.

ported favorably the Sheppard-Hill bill. House leaders hurried action on the farm bill conference report during the week in order to reach this measure, but had to switch to a long week-end adjournment when Representative Andrew J. May (Democrat), Kentucky, new committee chairman, appeared at the committee meeting with a bill of his own, almost identical in word-for-word phrasing to the Hill bill, and insisted that the committee report his bill favorably also.

Mavarick Sees Fascism.

Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas, who insists that both bills are "blueprints for a Fascist set-up in this country," balked and forced postponement, after lengthy argument, until next week.

The committee, at its meeting Tuesday, is expected to approve the May bill with a favorable report, which will place the committee in the unusual position of having reported practically the same bill twice. (Lister Hill, former chairman, an Alabama Democrat, is now Senator from Alabama.) In only the last section does the wording differ at all, and all committee-members interviewed yesterday maintained that the changes made there were immaterial.

President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress for $16,880,000 to strengthen the Army, in recommendations following those of his national defense message to Congress January 28.

His request would provide $8,800,000 for additional aircraft material; $6,080,000 for gauges, dies and other aids to the manufacture of Army material, and $2,000,000 to make up ammunition deficiencies. The request, made in a letter to Speaker William B. Bankhead, according to the Budget Bureau would be subdivided as follows:

Army engineers, $900,000; ordnance department, $14,172,062; chemical warfare service, $300,000; seacoast defenses, $538,800 for the continental United States and $349,713 for territorial and insular departments, and National Guard equipment, $574,425.

At his press conference yesterday, President Roosevelt expressed doubt he would have anything to say publicly on foreign affairs soon.

Before the House Naval Affairs Committee, Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, retired Army officer, declared in a bluntly-phrased statement that "the national security is being made the football of politics."

Offensive Weapon Seen.

Maj. Gen. William C. Rivers, also a retired Army officer, told the committee the proposed naval expansion would provide "a powerful weapon for offensive naval operations," and suggested as an alternative the increase of air, torpedo, mine and harbor defenses on the coastlines.

The Vinson proposal, in its entirety, reads:

"It is declared to be the fundamental naval policy of the United States to maintain an adequate Navy in sufficient strength to guard the continental United States by affording naval protection to the coastline, in both oceans at one and the same time; to protect the Panama Canal, Alaska, Hawaii, and our insular possessions; to protect our commerce and citizens abroad; to maintain a Navy in sufficient strength to guarantee our national security, but not for aggression; to insure our national integrity; and to support our national policies.

Must Keep Foe Distant.

"It is further declared to be the policy of the United States that an adequate naval defense means not only the protection of our continental coast-line, the Canal Zone, Alaska, Hawaii, and our insular possessions but also a defense that will keep any potential enemy away from our shores.

"The United States looks with apprehension and disfavor on the general increase in naval building throughout the world, but it realizes that no single nation can reduce its naval armament without jeopardizing its national security, except by common agreement.

"That, in the event of international agreement for the further limitations of naval armament to which the United States is signatory, the President is hereby authorized and empowered to suspend so much of its naval construction as has been authorized, as may be necessary to bring the naval armament of the United States within the limitations so agreed upon, except that such suspension shall not apply to vessels actually under construction on the date of the passage of this act.

Vinson has conferred with President Roosevelt several times during the past two weeks.

Says Hull "Taken for Ride."

On the Senate side, meanwhile, Senator Hiram W. Johnson (Republican), of California, told reporters that "continued evidences" of some sort of military agreement between the United States and Great Britain led him to believe that Secretary of State Cordell Hull "has been taken for a ride."

He said repeated references to such an agreement by newspapers and public officials left him unsatisfied with the Secretary's denial of Anglo-American alliances, understandings or agreements of any kind.

The House Naval Affairs Committee rejected, by a 14-2 vote, a motion by Representative Ralph Brewster (Republican), of Maine, to summon Arthur Krock, Washington, bureau chief of the New York Times, to name the source of his "information" that British and American navies automatically would complement each other in the Pacific if common interest demanded such co-operative action.

Hagood, who said he did not oppose naval expansion, told the committee that after 44 years in the Army he had been unable to determine what the national policy was.

would continue, for the main part, the anti-Semitic program. The announcement, in a formal governmental proclamation, indicated that anti-Semitism would continue to be the main feature of the Rumanian nationalist program.—Editor's Note.]

Throughout Rumania orderly, curious crowds gathered everywhere to read the king's manifesto. It decreed the state of siege, indefinitely postponed parliamentary elections and broadened the authority of military garrison commandants in large cities.

The army was accorded the right of search, instructed to take custody of arms and munitions in private possession and given control of a tightened press censorship.

Among new regulations, newspapers were prohibited from publishing photographs of political leaders and were restricted to official communiques in reporting foreign affairs.

The new dictatorial turn, it was emphasized at the palace, was merely a temporary emergency measure. Suspension of parties and of parliamentary rule, it was said, would last only until a new constitution was proclaimed. Meanwhile, Rumania will be ruled by decree under a cabinet coalition of center and liberal groups.

Pressure Ousted Goga.

London, Feb. 11 (AP).—Diplomatic quarters tonight said British pressure backed by France, played a large part in causing King Carol to dismiss Rumania's Nationalist, anti-Semitic Premier Octavian Goga.

Wife of Rubens Blames Trip to Russia on Mate

By the Associated Press.

State Department dispatches from Moscow yesterday indicated Mrs. Ruth Marie Rubens, New York, under arrest on suspicion of spying, went to Moscow at her husband's behest, not knowing the purpose of her trip.

She told American Charge D'Affaires Loy W. Henderson and Second Secretary Angus I. Ward, who visited her Thursday in Butyrskaya Prison, that her husband procured the passport under which she entered Russia as "Mrs. Ruth Norma Robinson."

She said she did not know how the Robinson passport was obtained, nor why her husband got it.

She said they had left New York under the name of Rubens and had traveled in transit under the same name. Her story indicated her husband, known also as Donald L. Robinson, gave her the passport just before they arrived at the Soviet frontier.

The interview between Mrs. Rubens and the American officials did not throw new light on the arrest itself. Two Russian officials and an interpreter were present and prevented the answering of any questions bearing on the official investigation, on the grounds the inquiry was not completed.

Nazis Blame Polish Jews for Revolt Reports

Aide With Hitler Denies Unrest; Army's Trust Apparently Growing.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 11.—The German army's feeling of trust in its new high command seems to be growing despite the uneasiness caused by Reichsfuehrer Hitler's centralization of control over the armed forces.

The general attitude of the army, as it recovered from the first shock of the purge of high-ranking officers, apparently was one of watchful waiting rather than any immediate worry over further shake-ups.

At the same time, however, army circles have not overlooked the fact that radicals in the Nazi party have been seeking to impress Hitler with the need for continued weeding out of reactionary commanders, particularly in the old guard strongholds of Pomerania and East Prussia.

Almost as though sensing this attitude, the propaganda ministry issued a statement that no changes were contemplated, apparently to allay whatever unrest may exist in the army.

Alfred Ingemar Berndt, vice chief of the government press department, issued a wholesale denial today of foreign reports growing out of the reorganization. He said Polish Jewish circles were responsible for the reports of garrison uprisings, impending army changes and the closing of Germany's frontiers.

Berndt offered free transportation to any foreign correspondent wanting to go to East Prussia to see for himself that reported friction did not exist between the army and the Schutz Staffle, Hitler's elite guard.

Authoritative Denial.

[At the same time the first authoritative and detailed official statement regarding the rumors pouring in across the German frontiers came to the United Press from Hitler's Berchtesgaden Mountain retreat in the Bavarian Alps.

[Dr. Otto Dietrich, Reich press chief and confidant of Der Fuehrer, gave a blanket denial of the rumors by telephone as Hitler sat only a few steps away "breakfasting on the verandah in the sunshine." Dietrich categorically described the flood of rumors as "false and stupid."

["I have read," he said, "what has been said abroad, that frontiers are closed, that the S. S. troops are being used in the army to watch over and expel reactionary officers, that there is unrest in the army.

"Everything Quiet."

["Since the official communique of February 4 (announcing the shake-up) everything has been quiet. The army is quiet. Every officer is doing his duty at his regular post.

["These rumors are false and stupid, and I am glad to have an opportunity to stamp them for what they may be worth."

[Dietrich said Hitler was in good health and that, while he was working every day, he was taking the opportunity of resting a little before returning to Berlin to address the Reichstag on Sunday, February 20.

Breakdown Denied.

[Asked whether Hitler was then preparing his Reichstag speech, Dietrich said:

["I do not know. It is possible. He works rapidly and does not need a long time."

[Branding reports of a "breakdown" as sheer nonsense, Dietrich said Hitler would be in Berlin next Tuesday for a reception to the diplomatic corps.

[Of the rumors of the closing of the Austrian, Belgian and Luxemburg frontiers, he said:

Papen to Confer.

[He closed the telephone conversation with the United Press by appealing to people abroad to "use common sense" in evaluating the sensational reports regarding Germany.

[Further refutation or the rumors regarding Hitler's health was contained in an announcement that Franz Von Papen, who was recalled last Friday from his post as Minister to Austria, had gone to Berchtesgaden to confer with Der Fuehrer.

[The Volkischer Beobachter, a prominent Nazi newspaper, ignored all the German rumors and attacked the United States Government's naval armament program.

["In order to make President Roosevelt's $800,000,000 appropriation acceptable to the United States public a campaign has been started which within a few days has agitated the country into a true war psychology," the newspaper said.—Editor's note.]

Friction Removed.

Foreign military observers are inclined to the view that some shuffling of officers automatically must continue. German army men reason, however, that while there may have been some regrettable victims of Hitler's unprecedented action the organization of the high command essentially has remained intact.

Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, Hitler's deputy war lord and chief of the high command, and Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the army, are men of the old school, trained in the old army tradition and seemingly determined to continue the old-line policy.

The friction which was known to have existed between Marshal Werner von Blomberg, the resigned war minister, and Gen. Werner von Fritsch, the resigned army commander in chief, has been smoothed away in the relations between Keitel and Von Brauchitsch.

Public Bewildered.

Von Blomberg was torn between his ties to the army and his loyalty to Hitler and the Nazi party. Von Fritsch was an uncompromising army man.

Summing up these points, one high military expert told the Associated Press that, solely from a standpoint of military cohesion, the top command wcs better organized then before.

The German public, meanwhile, has but one reaction: What was the shake-up all about?

By the Associated Press.

Bucharest, Feb. 11.—Cornelius Codreanu, leader of the political and social movement known as "All for Fatherland"—formerly the Iron Guard—instructed his followers today not to fight King Carol's sweeping government reorganization.

The 38-year-old Codreanu, whose organization has developed in four years to a position of political power, was silent on the new coalition government from which his party was omitted.

The sudden fall of the government of Premier Octavian Goga—whose policies in many respects resembled Codreanu's—was regarded in some quarters as also an oblique repudiation of the movement headed by the tall and extremely serious Codreanu.

"Not Our Turn Yet."

A spokesman for the movement met such speculation with the brief comment, "It's not our turn yet."

In the December elections Codreanu's party—which does not want the government yet and did not try very hard—received 28 per cent of the votes.

The result was the outstanding surprise of the election, demonstration that the handsome and light-haired Codreanu has come a long way since the Iron Guard was regarded merely as something of a nuisance to police four years ago.

He has been called a new "strong man" who is building a political organization by methods similar to those Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler employed in Germany.

Thinking Barred.

Codreanu believes in iron discipline. There is no independent thinking in the ranks of "All for Fatherland," a name the organization adopted when the Iron Guard was declared illegal following the assassination of Premier Duca in 1934.

The party is intensely anti-Semitic, as was the fallen Goga government.

"The Jews must go," he once said. "I am no geographer, so I can't suggest a place where they might go. But there must be room for them somewhere else."

Codreanu, whose followers greet him with a Fascist salute and a spirited greeting, "the captain lives!" appeals principally to youth, but he has obtained solid financial support from other groups with fascist inclinations.

CORNELIUS CODREANU.

Party Does Visible Work.

The foundation of the "All for Fatherland" organization is a vast number of "cells" of 10 to 20 members, usually of one school, factory or city block. District groups are formed by the cell leaders, each with a leader of its own.

There are 72 districts throughout Rumania, the leaders of which form a Senate constituting the highest authority of the party. The Senate is thoroughly disciplined, carrying out the will of the captain.

The small groups meet often for instruction and to participate in semi-military exercises. Members do, without compensation, the work Codreanu holds necessary for the welfare of Rumania — building bridges, repairing roads and helping peasants with the harvest.

Codreanu contrives to inject a touch of mysticism and religious zeal into the organization. Many of his speeches are vague, little understood by the peasants, but increasing numbers are being impressed by his zeal and by the fact that the party is doing visible, concrete work.

Soviet Restricts Aid to China To Avoid War

U. S. Ship Delivers Huge Munitions Cargo; Crew Gets Bonuses.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Feb. 12.—The Soviet Union has refused to increase her aid to China, according to reliable information, because of fear of becoming involved directly in the war with Japan.

Well-informed foreign sources said Russia had taken the stand she was in no position to take the risk of war with Japan singlehandedly.

Munitions of war are flowing into China, however. Dispatches from Honkong Friday said the United States freighter Michigan had unloaded an arms cargo that included bombs, ammunition and 12,000 cases of high explosive.

Some 15,000,000 gallons of aviation gasoline have arrived from the American Pacific Coast since Christmas.

The Michigan crew was reported to have received bonuses of from $150 to $300.

Authoritative foreign observers believe the Soviet Union is utilizing the Chinese-Japanese war as a laboratory for testing planes and other equipment and studying Japanese equipment and tactics.

The Russian government is understood to be selling the Chinese planes and munitions and to have placed no restrictions on Russian volunteers so long as they do not reach numbers that likely would embroil the Soviet Union directly.

In Moscow, the newspaper Pravda denied reports of huge armies and fleets of warplanes and submarines in the Far East as "inspired falsification."

There was sporadic fighting along the central China front, where eight Japanese armies are being reinforced for a drive to eliminate the Lunghai Railroad corridor that separates Japan's conquered areas in north and central China.

85 to Die in Tokyo.

Tokyo, Feb. 11 (AP).—A Domei (Japanese News Agency) dispatch from Hsinking, Manchukuo, today said the Manchukuo government announced that 85 persons arrested as Communists had been sentenced to death "for subversive maneuvers detrimental to peace and order." Sixty-four were sentenced to penal servitude. Nearly 200 are still under examination.

O'Connell Asks Active U. S. Aid In Peace Move

Montanan Declares Time Has Come to Abandon Isolation.

A plea for "active American participation in the search for peace" was voiced last night by three Congressmen before a mass meeting called by the Washington Committee for Aid to China.

"It is high time the United States deserts its policy of isolation," Representative Jerry J. O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana, declared.

Amendment of the neutrality act to permit embargo on all shipments to aggressor nations, combined with non-recognition of territorial change effected through violation of international treaties, will halt the march of the Japanese war machine, O'Connell asserted.

"Our bloc formed in Congress last night is sending out an appeal to the American people that democracy may triumph over fascism, progress over reaction, peace over war."

Volleys of applause rose from the audience of 400 in the Rialto Theater as Representative Byron N. Scott (Democrat), of California, and Representative Henry G. Teigan (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, indorsed their Montana colleague's suggestions for a new orientation of American foreign policy.

George W. Ingham Found Dead Here

George William Ingham, 67, commissioner of insurance for the District in 1910-11, was found dead yesterday in the bedroom of his mothers apartment, 1625 Sixteenth street northwest. An attending physician stated death was probably due to heart disease.

The body was discovered by Mrs. William F. Ingham, his mother, when she went to rouse him for breakfast. He had come to visit her several days ago, and was employed selling insurance in North Carolina.

Radio Carries Traffic Court Hearings Here

15-Minute Program From Newman's Bench Sponsored by Schulte.

"But Judge, I didn't see the light change."

These immortal words became an even more permanent part of Americana yesterday when thousands of Washingtonians got their first taste of police traffic arrests as three broadcasting stations carried 15-minute on-the-scene programs from Police Court.

The broadcasts were arranged under sponsorship of Representative William T. Schulte, chairman of the House District sub-committee on traffic. Microphones were placed near the defendant's chair, on Judge Hobart Newman's bench, before Clerk Joseph Burko's desk, and in front of the spectators.

First defendant was Reed Gale, 20, 1448 Girard street northwest, who was accused of exceeding the speed-limit on Q street. "My speedometer is broken, and I didn't know how fast I was going," he told Judge Newman.

"That's no excuse, $10 fine," Newman answered.

A parade of about 25 defendants came before the microphones, discussed their cases briefly, and paid their money, all for the benefit of radio listeners hearing the first broadcasts ever made from Washington's police court.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and other police officials were on hand to witness the experiment.

After the three 15-minute broadcasts, Van Duzer said the idea was "swell." Representative Schulte called it "great;" Judge Newman called it "good." Other officials all expressed approval.

Although regular 15-minute programs are planned for today and next week, final plans will be held in abeyance for listeners' reaction, radio station executives indicated.

Woman With Son In Bethesda Dives 8 Floors to Death

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 11 (AP).—Coroner John T. Fisher said Mrs. Harriet Kenmuir Long, 67-year-old winter visitor from McKeesport, Pa., and Bethesda, Md., died today as the result of an eight-floor plunge from a downtown hotel.

Coroner Fisher recorded the death as suicide and announced two notes found in Mrs. Long's room indicated the act was planned.

She was the widow of J. F. Long, former managing editor of the McKessport (Pa.) Daily News. He died here in 1934.

Mrs. Long had been visiting her son, E. John Long, at 7211 Exeter road, Bethesda, Md., for three months while undergoing an operation for cataract at Episcopal Eye, Nose and Throat Hospital. She left for Petersburg February 4, her son said.

Long said the operation apparently was entirely successful and his mother was in excellent spirits when she left here. Several letters and postcards she sent from the Florida resort indicated, he said, she was in good health. She left Bethesda, he said, with a round trip ticket, indicating she expected to return.

In addition to Long, she is survived by two daughters, Mrs. C. C. Peters, of McKeesport, Pa., and Mrs. W. L. Ogden, of New York City, and a sister, Mrs. S. W. Douglas, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Funeral services have been set tentatively for Tuesday afternoon at McKeesport.

Jail Demanded For Violators Of Speed Law

Schulte Asks Arrests of Motorists Who Race by Intersections.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Representative William Schulte (Democrat), Indiana, chairman of a special House subcommittee on traffic, last night advocated the arrest of all motorists who cross intersections at more than 15 miles an hour and straight jail sentences for drivers convicted of excessive speeds.

Speaking at a citizens mass meeting in the Departmental Auditorium, Schulte said he would recommend these methods of traffic control to Congress.

"We are trying to eliminate death from the streets of Washington," he told 200 District residents. "And if that is to be done, we must take drastic action. Unless every man, women and child in Washington cooperates, our efforts will fail."

Would Limit Speed.

Schulte's plan is to limit speed at intersections to 15 miles an hour, and he asks that drivers convicted of speeding 60 miles an hour should not only be fined, but forced to serve at least 10 days in jail.

By an overwhelming vote, the meeting adopted Schulte's proposal to jail offenders. It was further suggested that habitual violators be suspended for at least a year.

Lack of public co-operation in Washington was evident, speakers said, by the small attendance at last night's meeting. More than 1,500 persons had been invited.

Schulte cited "concrete examples" of the District's increased traffic problem. He compared figures showing that arrests for offenses jumped from 47,350 in 1933 to 94,119 last year.

"Maj. Brown, superintendent of police," said Schulte, "has promised me he will insist upon enforcement to the letter. He is going to make arrests for everything from reckless driving to double parking.

"Let Citizens Beware."

"Let the citizens of Washington beware—let them know we mean business, and these unnecessary deaths are going to be stopped."

The general opinion of the meeting was voiced by Harry Wender, chairman of the safety committee, Federation of Citizens' Associations. His group, he said, advocates:

An increased speed limit—from 22 miles to 25 miles an hour, and from 30 miles to 35 miles an hour.

A downtown ban on parking at all times.

Limitation of the number of taxis by law and insurance.

Gallinger Chief To Get Autograph

An autograph of the late Senator Jacob H. Gallinger (Republican), of New Hampshire, for whom Gallinger Hospital is named, will be presented to Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of the hospital, today by William J. Collins, superintendent of the Senate press gallery.

Collins said he obtained the signature in 1916 for his son, recently recovered it and has had it framed.

Senator Gallinger was chairman of the District appropriations subcommittee that recommended funds to build the hospital.

5,000 Hail Md. U. Students At 'All-University' Pageant

A festive crowd of 5,000 jammed into the Ritchie Coliseum at the University of Maryland last night watched 400 students put on an "all-university" pageant that dramatically demonstrated the activities of the various departments.

The crowd, which had just seen the Maryland basketball team defeat Virginia Military Institute, hushed when a fanfare of bugles announced the opening number of the pageant—a parade of 26 campus beauties, clad in white satin, carrying the flags of the 23 Maryland counties, the City of Baltimore flag and the flags of the State of Maryland and of the United States.

There followed a silent manual drill staged by the crack Pershing rifle drill team of the university R. O. T. C. unit. The team members were dressed in the type of uniform worn by the original "Old Line" troops of the Revolution. The "New Line" came on then, a group of 12 co-eds who tapped out a sprightly dance amid shouts of approval.

The girls' tap dance made an easy transition from the martial past to the swing-time of the present of Maryland. With the university's swing-band blaring out "Festive Rhythm," some 40 girls from the Woman's Physical Education Department went into an interpretive dancing number. Nobody knew just what they were interpreting, but the crowd liked it just the same.

After Merrill Lank, swing-band leader, had injected an element of humor into the proceedings with the song, "A Thousand Times No," a group of girl archers did a bow-and-arrow act. This number included an exhibition by Jean Ainsworth Tenny, physical education instructor at Hagerstown, Md., and national woman archery champion.

Miss Tenny, with the hall darkened, burst four balloons at 45 feet while the audience sat tensely, not knowing who was going to be hit with the next arrow.

Other numbers on the program included a fencing exhibition between two coeds, a tumbling act by members of the Men's Physical Education Department, a wrestling match between Philip Brooks and Paul McNeil and songs by both the Men's and the Women's Glee Clubs.

The pageant closed with the song, "The Lord's Prayer," by the men's quartet. After that, the crowd settled down to watch the Maryland and Western Maryland University boxers pummel each other.

Austrian Costume Is Described to the Geographic Society

Paris fashions have elbowed exotic styles even from many of the remote regions of Europe, but there are still thousands of Austrians who adorn themselves in folk costumes that outdo the rainbow in color. Thus spoke W. Robert Moore, of the National Geographic Magazine staff, to members of the National Geographic Society last night at Constitution Hall when he described his stay in the European republic.

Moton pictures of modern Vienna illustrated his remarks. Moore pointed out that the city, which before the World War was capital to nearly 50,000,000 but now administers the affairs of only about 6,000,000, still is a beehive of commerce and industry and one of the loveliest capitals in Europe.

Swinging through Salzburg and then into the Tyrol, Moore's color camera caught the change in the style of costumes.

'Caught by Past,' Walter Reed Aid Leaps to Death

Private Talbott F. Shadrick, 21 an orderly at Walter Reed Hospital, was found dead in a courtyard of the hospital building shortly after he rode to the fourth floor in an elevator last night. Police said a one-sentence note, written on a scrap of paper a foot square, was found on his body.

"My background has caught up with me," they said the note read.

According to Private James Cryer, operating an elevator in No. 2 Mess Building, Shadrick got on his vehicle shortly after 8 p. m. and rode to the fourth floor. After Shadrick's body was found in the courtyard, Policeman Richard Conklin of the Sixth Precinct, said he found tracks leading from the interior of the hospital to the edge of the roof where Shadrick disappeared. The roof is 80 feet above the earth.

Shadrick's body was discovered by Private W. F. Kosevesh, who called Corporal John Faulkner, in charge of the guard.

Parents Cause Juvenile Crime, Curran Avers

Police Judge Says Solution to Lawlessness Is 'in the Cradle.'

Parents who fail to exert proper control over their children are largely responsible for juvenile crime, Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran told mothers and fathers of students at Gonzaga High School last night.

Warning his audience that complete elimination of organized crime "by an aroused public opinion" is impossible, Judge Curran asserted that "we can minimize crime; we can control it, whenever public sentiment is sufficiently aroused and stays aroused and is wisely directed."

"If you parents and teachers would accept your responsibility in fuller measure, I'd have less to do," he stated.

Necessity of instilling in children respect for their parents was emphasized by the speaker. "If they have respect for parents, they will have respect for the law when they grow up," he said. "The solution to the crime problem—if any there be—lies in the cradle; and that's where the parents' duty comes in."

Judge Curran pointed out that "most first thefts are merely to obtain the luxury of movies, a ball game or a bag of candy." He said that parents should strive to provide "amusement" for their children. In the case of the poor, he held that Government aid in the necessities of life would permit parents to afford their children some of the luxuries.

Statistics of his own court show an increase in District crime, Judge Curran declared. He said that "crime is primarily the responsibility of society rather than of the criminal."

A white bandit working on foot looted a Columbia road market of $460 last night, while police reported arrest of three alleged jewel thieves in Philadelphia and 39 colored men were lined up before robbery victims at detective headquarters.

Oscar Gildenhorn, 37, proprietor of the market held up, told police the bandit entered his establishment about 8 o'clock, pointed a pistol in his direction and ordered him to open the cash register. He said the entire store force was near the register and under range of the gun.

In the store with the proprietor were Mrs. Celia Gildenhorn, his wife; Joseph Gildenhorn, his son; Hyman Bernstein, a clerk; Miss Dorothea Berg, cashier; Henry Brooks, colored, delivery boy, and Irving Zimmerman, clerk.

Gems and Silverware.

The three men arrested in Philadelphia were said by police to have taken thousands of dollars worth of gems and silverware from Washington homes. They said they believed capture of the trio virtually broke up the mob.

The detective roundup, while it failed to attach blame for robberies to any of the men held, led to several arrests for vagrancy. Police last night did not reveal the names of those held.

Suitcases filled with more than 200 watches, jewels and silverware valued in excess of $50,000 were found in their possession.

Two Washington detectives were sent to Philadelphia with Commissioners' warrants for the three, who gave their names as Clarence O. Humphries, Leslie Engle and Herman L. Ross.

Tip on Silverware.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson said local police received "certain information" that a suitcase of stolen silverware would be delivered to a Philadelphia address. At his request, Philadelphia police confiscated the suitcase and arrested Humphries and Engle. When Ross appeared at the address later they also arrested him with another suitcase.

Although Thompson said he did not recognize the names, he said Humphries and Engle fitted descriptions of men wanted by local police for a series of breaking into wealthy home while occupants are out of town.

Washington police said some of the loot was identified as that of Arthur Myers, 4717 Blagden Terrace northeast, whose home was looted Wednesday while his wife and daughter were in Florida.

A letter addressed to Myers was found in the suitcase in Ross' possession along with a watch inscribed with his name. Other stolen valuables which Myers reported to Washington police included silver plates, a silver coffee set and salt and pepper shakers, silver bowl, a diamond studded watch chain and cuff links.

In a record lineup police paraded the 39 suspects gathered up in raids on beer taverns, pool halls and cheap rooming houses the last several days.

Speedy Comedy And Fine Acts On Earle Bill

'Swing Your Lady' Makes Hit and Vaudeville Scores Bullseye.

"SWING YOUR LADY." Warner Brothers' picturization of the stage play by Kenyon Nicholson and Charles Robinson, adapted to the screen by Joseph Schrank and Maurice Leo, featuring Louise Fazenda, Nat Pendleton, Humphrey Bogart and Penny Singleton, with Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins, the Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Hugh O'Connell, Olin Holand, Sammy White, Ronald Reagan and John Howard. Directed by Ray Enright. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At the Earle Theater.

One mountainous show is offered by the Earle this week. Nor does this refer especially to the fact that "Swing Your Lady" is a hill-billy show to end all hill-billy shows.

Without blown-up ballyhoo or pretensions, "Swing Your Lady" is one of the most genuinely entertaining of pictures, speeding along at a great pace and cutting plenty of corners.

Though Pinky Tomlin and Lee Dixon head the stage show and perform with great eclat-ter, every performer in the stage show is smart as a button. Altogether the Earle management is presenting a whole show keyed to "Big Apple" rhythm and deserves a big apple (and a red one, at that) for its showmanship.

"Swing Your Lady" represents the triumph of a flock of clever screen people, all given equal play as contrasted to the often flivvering star system. Its story is a whoopeeroo affair about the love of a slap-happy wrestler and a lady blacksmith of the Ozarks. An added fang is lent by contrasting the so-called simplicity of the hill-billies with the tactics of a fast-working wrestling manager.

There are a few lines that if delivered by Mae West would have the censors in a dither, but they slip by harmlessly and with the greatest of ease.

An Impregnable Cast.

The strength of the picture, which should be a tremendous clean-up in the neighborhoods, lies in a practically impregnable cast. Nat Pendleton, who is getting to be quite a picture stealer, is not only too funny but darned ingratiating. You should love the scene where his entourage spell out the words they don't want him to hear, not to mention the shrieker where, while practicing regular rassling with Louise Fazenda, he suddenly goes into amorous rassling and has to be torn from her by his handlers.

Add to the stupendous Nat such gorgeous acting folk as Humphrey Bogart, as the wrestling manager; Allen Jenkins and Frank McHugh, as trainers; Louise Fazenda, comically mountain-y, both as to figure and chatter; pretty and sizzling Penny Singleton, the Weaver Brothers and Elviry in their best form; Daniel Boone Savage as an improvement over "Man Mountain" Dean—just consider all these smart people in their best and most hilarious form and you will know that the combination offers entertainment that is hard to beat.

A bunch of smartly balanced shorts includes a good newsreel, a popular science short in Technicolor and an Edgar Kennedy-Bill Franey comedy dealing with misdirected room-renting.

Stage Show Matches Up.

Pinky Tomlin, most appealing of apparently unsophisticated lads, and Lee Dixon, the big blond dancing rascal, head a stage show that is practically impeccable.

Pinky, composer of that national contagion of a couple of years ago, known as the "Object of My Affections," is one of the most simply likable of stage figures. Unpretentious as the nice boy next door, he gained the immediate affection of the audience. But it would be grand if Pinky would make all of his songs new ones, with the exception of the aforesaid "Object, etc."

Lee Dixon, handsomer in person than on the screen, danced as handsomely as he does in the big film musicals. His tremendous height makes his magical dancing seem all the more incredible. As a dancing accomplice he has a Frenchified little imp (wickedly brunette) whose name we didn't catch. All the little girls down front goggled and smiled at Lee.

Girl trumpeters, very accomplished, supplemented the highly smart dancing of Irene Vermilion. Dick, Don and Dinah (and the lovely Dinah is just as important as the rest of the act) are comedian acrobats of the best. Schichtl's Wonderettes are the cutest marionettes ever appearing on a local stage. Really, the stage show as a whole is a sweetie.

Jo Lombardi, director of the Earle orchestra, rates another cluster of laurels for an original and rich arrangement of "Alexander's Ragtime Band" in three manners. We feel that Irving Berlin would love it.

Metropolitan

That remarkably daff demonstration of how mystery murder trials should not be conducted in open court, "True Confession," reawakened downtown interest yesterday by inaugurating a repeat engagement in the Metropolitan Theater as chief screen feature of the new week's bill.

This is the wholly crazy and completely delightful comedy in which the three stellar roles are played by Carole Lombard, John Barrymore and Fred MacMurray, supported by such veteran comics as Una Merkel, Edgar Kennedy, Richard Carle, Porter Hall, Lynne Overman, John T. Murray, Toby Wing and others of similarly high standing in the laugh factories.

The story hinges upon the inability of a flittery young wife to tell the truth, the strict adherence to ethics and fact by her lawyer husband and the imbecile antics of a "master criminologist" and barfly philosopher. These roles are played, respectively, by Miss Lombard, Mr. MacMurray and Mr. Barrymore. They are assisted in the formulation of the play's genial humor at opportune and frequent periods by the "slow-burning" Mr. Kennedy, the piquant Miss Merkel, Richard Carle, as a particularly jovial judge; Porter Hall, as a unique district attorney, and all the others.

The whole thing doesn't make much sense, but it does make for an hour or so of enlivening entertainment. A subtitle of the drama might well have been "How Not to Conduct a Murder Trial." But, on the other hand, if it hadn't been conducted that way, where would you be?

The bill is completed by the usual short subjects and a new release of the full length composite newsreel.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

'Snow White,' at RKO-Keith's, Is a Screen Miracle; Somber Picture and Lively Revue at Loew's Capitol

Walt Disney Proves Self Genius in First Full Feature in Color.

"SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS." Walt Disney's first feature-length, Technicolor production for RKO-Radio. The famous Grimm fairy tale executed in cartoon form, without living actors, under the supervising direction of David Hand, with the full corps of Disney artists and animators participating in the formulation of a unique picture that it required more than two years to make. Musical score and "dubbed in" voices of perfect selection. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

BELL.

Although there is an intense and inescapable realism apparent in everything that is revealed upon the screen in this amazing subject, a commentator finds his approach considerably involved by the absence of living characters upon the silver sheet. The thing resolves itself into a contemplation of the inspired artistry of Walt Disney and his associate artists, who, after more than two years of continuous effort, have evolved a motion picture feature the like of which never before has been seen.

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," as this department has endeavored to say on previous occasions, is unique among screen releases. It is the only one of its kind—perhaps a precursor of other pictures in the cartoon medium that will attempt to emulate its perfection, but, at the moment, a solitary example of what may be accomplished in the way of entertainment by a happy concert of imagination, beauty, humor, tunefulness, drama and color. It is so exorbitantly rich in every element of joyous diversion that it stands apart from any conventional dramatic form. There is nothing with which to compare it.

Is Imaginative Gem.

The story of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," of course, is known to every person who can read. The tale of the demure little princess whose beauty was such as to arouse the murderous envy of her jealous queen offers unexampled opportunities for the exercise of Mr. Disney's peculiar gift for bringing to his gelatin canvases the fascinating quirks of birds, beasts, reptiles and whatnot, in addition to the quaint conceits of human beings actuated by strange motives. Of all of this wealth of material for inventive picturization the Disney studio has taken full advantage.

There is so much of diversity in the picture that its complete content cannot possibly be apprehended at one viewing. The screen is constantly alive with the utterly devastating activities of an astonishingly comprehensive roster of every living thing that might be found upon the land, in the air or under the sea. This, naturally, is only picturesque and illuminating background for the recital of the tale of Snow White and the seven grotesque little men whose tiny home comprised her hospice after the queen's homicidal emissary had refused to carry out her command to plunge a dagger into the heart of a child whose only offense was beauty greater than her own.

Snow White's arrival in the wilderness, to the complete bewilderment of all the gay little animals and birds, turtles and bugs that never had seen a human being before, is the occasion that first reveals Disney's miraculous power of imagery. No more charming, more humorous or more sprightly scenes ever have been projected before a marveling eye. The later scenes of the seven dwarfs at work in their mines, their return to the cottage that has been commandeered by the elfin sprite who immediately captures their hearts, and the climactic episodes of the fanciful tale, in which the queen meets a violent and deserved end, with two watchful vultures as the symbol of her fate, are perfectly balanced in humor, pathos and thrills.

The seven dwarfs are admirably differentiated and among the most fabulous figures with whom any audience ever has enjoyed a sympathetic hour or two. Dopey probably will be the one who will engage your major interest, provided you have an eye and ear for typical Disney fun.

"Cast" Is Perfectly Chosen.

One of the conspicuous merits of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" lies in the superb selection of voices to be "dubbed in" for the various characters. Snow White is spoken and sung by an unknown little Italian girl, with a limpid soprano voice that is exquisite in song and captivating in speech; the most garrulous of the dwarfs is enunciated by that inimitable master of twisted speech, Roy Atwill. The identities of the others I do not know. I do know that all are perfect choices for their allotted tasks.

In the matter of coloration, "Snow White" also establishes a new high mark for Technicolor achievement. The same is true of the synchronization of movement, sound and voice. Even the lip movements of the drawn characters form the words they are supposed to say, both in dialogue and in the delivery of the picture's lilting lyrics.

There is so much of superlative merit in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" that one can only say, in summation, that it is a great picture—great in conception, great in execution and great in its capacity to hold a spectator enthralled. It is an experience in the theater that no one should permit himself to miss.

There are, to be sure, one or two minor items of a supplementary nature on the new bill at Keith's, but they will serve only as annoying interruptions of one's anxiety to see "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" several times in succession—something, by the way, that the management would like to find some means of averting.

Rich Kernel.

Five of the most tuneful melodies Jerome Kern ever wrote make up an important part of RKO Radio's new comedy, "The Joy of Loving." They were sung by Irene Dunne, who stars opposite Douglas Fairbanks, jr.

Returns to Screen at Capitol

one of the most distinguished actors in the American theater, who makes his first screen appearance since "Dodsworth" in the role of Ethan Wilkins in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Of Human Hearts," a film version of "Benefits Forgot," currently on view at Loew's Capitol Theater. He is surrounded by an excellent cast, led by Beulah Bondi and James Stewart.

Walter Huston Resumes Work Before Cameras; Helen Morgan Hit.

Firmly grounded in the serious concerns of family relationships, filial duty, the deprivations of life on a primitive frontier and the selfish aspirations of uncurbed character, "Of Human Hearts," withal its somber implications, still is a picture that deserves to be seen.

It is a sturdy exposition of unpleasant fact, set forth with consummate skill by an especially able group of players; a relentless analysis of conflicting natures and the dire consequences that result from a lack of sympathy between father and son and the exquisite torture thoughtlessly inflicted upon a doting mother.

"Of Human Hearts" is not a happy picture. It is, on the contrary, a penerating study in those unfortunate aspects of family life that occasion anguish, mental turmoil and suffering. But it grips the interest and leaves a definite impression of dramatic strength and solid worth.

Presents Accurate Pattern.

The principal figures in the film play that has been fashioned from Honore Morrow's novel of "Benefits Forgot" are a circuit-riding minister of the Gospel, his wife and his small son, who grows into manhood to become the foremost surgeon serving the Union Army in the War Between the States. The scene is a sparsely settled village in Ohio in the late '50s and early '60s. The quality of the tale is homespun and homely, but through the fabric of the play there is always apparent the fidelity to types and meager living which it so minutely patterns.

The cast chosen for the envisionment of this drab tale is one that long has specialized in this genre. Walter Huston, as Ethan Wilkins, the preacher of the Gospel called to an outlying Ohio hamlet from his previous pastorate in Marylan', finds himself in the sort of congenial assignment that strikes a happy harmony with the distinctive genuineness of his talents. As his wife, Beulah Bondi, one of the theater's finest character actresses, has a role as completely within her grasp as her earlier appointments in "Street Scene," "The Gorgeous Hussy," "Make Way for Tomorrow" or any of the other plays and pictures with which her name is indelibly linked.

James Stewart, as the grown-up son, Jason Wilkins, offers his customarily subdued performance in the part of the ambitious young surgeon who only realized his shortcomings as a son after President Lincoln had pointed them out to him with that vast compassion that marked every impulse of a man whose heart overflowed with human kindness. As Lincoln, John Carradine presents perhaps the best etching of the martyred President that ever has been brought to the screen—not an easy task.

Guy Kibbee contributes a ready flow of backwoods comedy to the development of the play—tinctured, generally, with a strong injection of greed—and Charles Coburn as the renegade Doctor Charles Shingle, who drinks whiskey and smokes tobacco, takes his place among the most able and most immensely moving of all the cinema's elder actors. Two youngsters acquit themselves with fine credit, too—Leatrice Joy Gilbert, daughter of the late John Gilbert, and Martin Graff, the M.-G.-M. newsboy. There is also a splendid equine actor in the cast, a white horse that looks remarkably like Hobart Bosworth's mount, Cameo.

A contrasting note—thus giving the bill excellent balance—is struck at the Capitol this week by the "World's Fairest on Parade Revue," staged by Harry ("Little Ziggy") Howard. This is the pretentious musical spectacle that has Helen Morgan as its bright particular star.

Miss Morgan A Hit.

Miss Morgan yesterday afternoon won the complete enthusiasm of her audience in a group of songs culled from her former stage successes—"Sweet Adeline," "Showboat" and the rest—and including a new number from the "Big Broadcast of 1938." "My Bill" is still Miss Morgan's favorite number—and the audience's, too, for that matter—but "Just Can't Help Lovin' That Man" and "Make Believe" likewise rate high. "Thanks for the Memory" is the new gem. Nobody can impart to songs of this character quite the plaintive charm conveyed to them by Helen Morgan. She is the undisputed high priestess of this sort of thing and is at her best this week.

There are so many others in the high-geared stage goings-on that they can be no more than mentioned. Shea and Raymond, of course, are known eccentrics of the first rank in their dances and songs; Paul Nolan is a juggler, highly reminiscent of Stan Kavanagh—or it it the other way around?—Helen Ethridge, a toe dancer of the first flight; Ray Hunt, an effective barytone; Ray Arnaut, a dancer in the Fred Astaire manner; Daro and Costa among the better adagioists and Sylvia Harris, a singer of parts. Then there are those gorgeous dancing girls and statuesque "show girls" to round out the business.

With the usual auxiliaries it all adds up to a diversified and engaging instrument for slaughtering two or three otherwise idle hours.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Feb. 12.—Idol chatter: Just in case you are interested, lapis lazuli is the latest jewelry rage of Hollywood's stars. Odd conceits: Fernand Gravet is inordinately proud of his honorary membership in the Boy Scouts and would much rather talk about woodcraft than acting. The Michael Brook who appears in Paramount pictures, is, in private life, His Lud'ship, the Earl of Warwick. When more colorful socks are worn, they will probably make their debut of the shapely limbs of Gene Raymond. Things that amaze me; how any healthy, active adult can exist on the starvation diet which Joan Crawford imposes upon herself.

GENE RAYMOND.

The movie censors in Canada's various provinces are the "toughest" known. Between pictures, Grace Moore spends one entire day each week in bed. Best off-screen comedy of the week: Eleanor Powell's burlesque of "The Dance of the Dying Swan." The man doesn't live who would not thrill to Loretta Young's low-voiced "darling." It is harder for an unknown to get a hearing from any one of Hoolywood's topnotch-actors' agents than it is to get a luncheon date with Sam Goldwyn.

* * * *

Today's consoling thought: after all, the Ritz Brothers might have been quintuplets! It always enrages me to hear a screen star speak of "My public"—and most of them do it on every possible occasion. Erich von Stroheim, jr., is a clerk in the mail room of Twentieth Century-Fox. And it is no wonder one of the screen's most idolized young actors likes to smile so widely—his teeth cost him $1,500.

* * * *

Consider the amusing case of Michael Bartlett. Some three years ago, he made quite a hit in one of Grace Moore's film-operas. Unfortunately, the studio which owned his contract left him to idle for several months after the release of that first picture—and Hollywood promptly forgot him. For the next two years, he was shunted around from Hollywood's pillars to Hollywood's posts. He played with Marion Talley in an independent "super" which just missed clicking; he made a picture in England which was praised by the continental critics but overlooked by America. Any producer could have signed Mike for $400 or $500 a week—a mere pittance as Hollywood salaries go. And then, suddenly, he got a break on the stage. Today, three major studios are on the knees to Mr. Bartlett, begging him to put his John Henry on the dotted line, and allow them to pay him several thousand dollars every Wednesday. And I will lay you ten to one that the producer who wins in the competition will announce Mike Bartlett as his "discovery!"

Chatting with Harold Lloyd today and asked him to name the 10 comedies which in his estimation are the greatest in screen history. After considerable thought, he named five Chaplin pictures—"Dough and Dynamite," "The Kid," "Shoulder Arms," "The Gold Rush" and "A Dog's Life"—Buster Keaton's "Seven Days," Laurel and Hardy's "The Battle of the Century," Mable Normand's "Mickey," the Marx Brothers' "Cocoanuts" and two ancient Mack Sennett two-reelers. I accused him of undue modesty and met a retort that contains a profound truth. "Don't credit me with modesty," said Harold. "The fact is that I've worked too hard on my own comedies to regard them as laughing matters."

Set-visited with my favorite Southerner, Una Merkel, this afternoon and found her a-dither with apprehension. Seems that the company worked on location for several hours this morning. At 5:15 a. m., a studio car was sent for Una—and somebody blundered. The driver, supplied with the wrong street number, spent the better part of an hour ringing doorbells in her neighborhood and being roundly cursed by the indignant citizenry. "What you need," I suggested, "is your name in Neon lights—a la Tom Mix—over your doorway." "What I really need now," answered Una, gloomily, "is a public relations council—and a hotel hoom where I can live until my neighbors learn to forget and forgive!"

Trans-Lux

Running a full 75 minutes, the Trans-Lux show this week fairly bursts with good news and interesting short subjects.

Other events are the United States Navy forging ahead with its preparedness program, New York City cracking down on the underworld, the tryouts of the new plane to survey the stratosphere, and a new type plane that promises new speed records. The ladies get a thrill from the pictured "Vogue" evening gowns and everyone screams as Lew Lehr describes beef trust beauties.

Among the sport pictures—all of which are exciting, and some thrilling—is a shot of Washington-Lee College wrestlers in a battle royal.

New York, February 11.

AL CAPONE: The history of your tax case was presented to one of America's most famous attorneys—a former aspirant for national office—who first insisted that the "client's" name be kept from him, so that he could determine his fee according to the work necessary, instead of basing it upon ability to pay. He declared that in his opinion the defendant was innocent. But then he was told that you were the defendant involved—and refused the case . . . A. S. P. C. "THE BUCCANEER." Paramount's picturization of a scenario by Jeanie McPherson based on Lyle Saxon's "Jean Lafitte, the Pirate," starring Frederic March, supported by Franciska Gaal, Margot Grahame, Akim Tamiroff, Ian KeKith, Beulah Bondi, Robert Barrat, Douglas Dumbrille and Walter Brennan. Directed by Cecil B. De Mille. Reviewed second week by Dorothea Lewis.

The Buccaneer" is laying a proper siege to F street and well it might, for it has excitement, adventure, humor, spirit and the added zest of true history about it.

One of the most interesting things about this excellent picture is its fidelity to facts. Of course, Jean Lafitte lived a perfect scenario, so there would be no reason to embroider or improve upon the truth for glamor's sake.

There are a few little twists and changes, and we know nothing of Jean's love life, but for the most part this story of the New Orleans blacksmith-turned-privateer, who broke all laws but that of patriotism and who forced more respectable patriots to accept his help in saving his city, is essentially truthful.

Among the slight discrepancies are the circumstances of his meetings with Governor Claiborne and Andrew Jackson. History would reverse the cinema, for according to documentary evidence, Lafitte held Claiborne at gun's length while "volunteering," but came in more peaceably to see Jackson. Then after the victory at Chalmette, Lafitte was pardoned with his men instead of receiving the movie's "one-hour's start," but hardly an hour did elapse before he and his brother, Pierre, were off for Galveston to ravish Spanish ships in the Gulf. Thus even the altered facts, do not violate the spirit of the man or his history.

Fredric March brings Lafitte forth from the pages of history with all the color and violent life of the man and his time. He is a perfect realization of the man who brought New Orleans' district attorney to defend his brother Pierre, who, dressed in his famous bottle-green coat, white leather breeches and high back boots, strode up to placards offering rewards for his capture and posted his slave auction announcements just below them, who spoke in a soft accent but flashed fire from both eyes and guns.

And yes, if you care to know and you must, Dominique You, played so excellently and amusing by Akim Tamiroff, was real enough, though probably not nearly so charming. He and Belouche did handle the batteries in the Battle of New Orleans.

Throughout the picture, the photography is of very high standard and reaches a peak in the swamps and bayous, when the pirates are called in to fight. The musical background adds much. DeMille has given vigor and force to his film.

Clark Griffith
50 Years in Baseball

By Shirley Povich

Famous Seventh Game of 1924 World Series; Harris Strategy Successful in Initial Inning; "Big Barney" Finishes 12-Inning Thriller.

Chapter Twenty-Eight.

STRANGER THAN THE WILDEST BASEBALL FICTION was the story that unfolded itself in that seventh and decisive game of the 1924 World Series. Even a Hollywood scenarist, in his dizziest flight of fancy, would have been incapable of the plot. It was no mere drama that was enacted as the Giants and Washington met at Griffith Stadium on October 10; it was melodrama.

In a banner-bedecked box, adjacent to the Washington dug-out, were President and Mrs. Coolidge. In the grandstands and bleachers were 31,677 rabid fans. Warming up for the Giants was Jesse Barnes, who had faced Washington in the fourth game. Again, he was the pitching choice of John McGraw. Making ready to pitch for Washington was handsome Curly Ogden, star of the team's late-season surge.

And on the Nats' bench was the forlorn figure of Walter Johnson, doomed, apparently, to emerge as the goat of the first World Series in which he had figured, after 17 years of honorable toil in pennant races. Twice during the series, Johnson had gone to the mound for the Nats. Twice he had been beaten. There appeared no place for him in this final game.

The night before, he had visited the Griffith Stadium offices bent on purchasing tickets for his mother for the final game. It was a sad-eyed, woebegone Johnson who was feeling keenly his two defeats. Johnson was blaming himself for any uphappy fate that might come to the Nats in the series. After that loss to the Giants in New York, he had actually cried aloud on the return trip to Washington.

President Clark Griffith made light of the big pitcher's failures. "Never mind what has gone before, Walter," he said, "we'll still beat the Giants. Go home and rest. Don't let everybody shake your hand. It won't do your pitching arm any good. We may need you tomorrow. I'd like to see you in there."

"I'd give everything I own to be in there tomorrow, but I don't blame Bucky Harris," said Johnson. "He can't afford to take another chance on me. I'm washed up in this series. But I'd like one more shot at 'em."

Harris-Griffith Strategy in Seventh Game of 1924 Series.

THE 31,667 FOLKS WHO HEARD Umpire Bill Dineen shout "Play Ball!" that October day, sat in on history-making strategy in the first inning. Curly Ogden, pitching to the first Giant batter, Freddie Lindstrom, struck him out. The next hitter, Frankie Frisch, he walked. And then Ogden himself walked calmly out of the box, tossed his glove into the dug-out, and . . . but what was this?

It was Bucky Harris, the boy manager, taking the lead in the battle of wits with John McGraw. Ogden's presence on the mound had been a ruse to place McGraw at a disadvantage at the outset. It had been mapped out in Clark Griffith's office earlier that morning.

To Griffith, Harris unfolded a bold plan. He would start the right-handed Ogden and trick McGraw into putting his left-handed hitters into the line-up. Then, in the first inning, he would lift Ogden and

"If the Giants switch to their right-handed batting order after that, I'll switch to Fred Marberry," Harris explained. "By that time, the Giants won't have any pinch hitters left. But the guy I don't want to see in the Giants' line-up is Bill Terry. He has murdered our pitching—made six hits in 12 times at bat so far. They'll put him in there if we start Ogden. But, if they want to leave him in there against Mogridge, that will be all right with me. He doesn't figure to hit left-handed pitching. And the chances are that, when we shove in Mogridge, they'll lift Terry and we'll be rid of him. I'll feel a lot safer with him out of the line-up. What do you say, Mr. Griffith?"

And Clark Griffith, who had been a star pitcher before Harris was born, and a pennant-winning manager when Harris was swinging on the gate, said "Bucky, it's a new one on me, but I like your idea. Go ahead."

AND THAT'S WHAT HAPPENED. Mogridge replaced Ogden in that first inning, to the great surprise of McGraw. And, against such left-handed pitching, McGraw pulled the hitless Terry off first base, benched him and inserted the right-handed hitting George Kelly. As early as the fourth inning, Harris was rid of Kelly.

For three innings, it was a scoreless duel. And then Bucky Harris who, in 143 games during the regular season, had made only one home run, equaled that output in the fourth inning against Barnes. He slammed a four-base wallop into the centerfield bleachers and established the Nats with a 1-0 lead, as the 31,667 went into a frenzy of applause.

But, in the sixth inning, Mogridge faltered. He walked Ross Young, pitched a single to George Kelly. Marberry was rushed to the box by Harris. A long fly off Irish Meusel's bat brought Young home from third with the tying run . . . and the Giants were yet not through. Wilson cracked a single to center, Judge fumbled a ball off Jackson's bat, Gowdy reached base on a fumble by Bluege, and Barnes drove a long fly to Rice. The Giants had three runs for the inning and a 3-1 lead.

It was still 3 to 1 as the Nats went to bat in the eighth. Little Nemo Leibold was Harris' choice as a pinch hitter for Third Baseman Tom Taylor, who was playing despite a broken hand. Leibold justified Harris' choice. He whacked a clean double down the leftfield foul line. Next man up was Muddy Ruel, who, in 18 times at bat in the series, had failed to make a hit. But hit he did at that point—a clean single that sent Leibold to third. Tate batted for Marberry and drew a walk from Barnes. Washington's hopes sagged when McNeely's short fly fell harmlessly into Meusel's hands and, with two out and the bases filled, the issue was strictly up to Manager Bucky Harris.

Harris met the issue and . . . it might be added . . . the ball. He drove a sharp bounder down the third-base line for a single and Leibold and Ruel were home with the tying runs.

Among the Nats' needs, as the ninth inning opened with the score tied at 3 to 3, was a pitcher. Marberry had vanished from the line-up when Tate batted for him in the eighth. Harris scanned the Nats' bench for pitching talent. His eyes fell on—you guessed it—Walter Johnson.

Johnson's First Pitch a Clean Triple to Frankie Frisch.

NEVER HAD GRIFFITH STADIUM witnessed such an uproarious greeting as was showered on Johnson when the 31,667 fans realized that Big Barney was getting another chance in the World Series. As he strode to the mound, his long arms dangling, his gait best described as a trudge, Johnson was cheered for minutes on end. This was the chance he had asked—that one more shot at the Giants. He set his face grimly and wound up with the most famous fireball in all baseball history . . . a clean triple, by Frankie Frisch, to the centerfield corner.

With one out in the ninth and Frisch on third, Johnson calmly looks to Harris for instructions. He gets a signal, deliberately walks Ross Young. Now a fly off the bat of George Kelly will bring the run home. But there is no long fly. There are three wickedly pitched strikes . . . and Johnson fans Kelly. Next, he retires Meusel on a grounder to third.

In the eleventh, with Hughie McQuillan pitching for the Giants, it is still 3 to 3. Pinch hitter Heinie Groh singles to right with none out. Southworth runs for Groh and Jackson sacrifices him to second. Frankie Frisch is no problem to Johnson. He strikes him out. With Ross Young at bat, Johnson gets a sign from Harris. He passes Young deliberately. It's Kelly now, again. Kelly Johnson strikes out for the second time . . . and it's still 3 to 3.

Fuming, the Giants return to the attack in the twelfth. Meusel singles to rightfield, with none out. It's Hack Wilson up. Johnson strikes him out. Now it's Meusel. He hits into a force play at second. Gowdy? he flied harmlessly to Goslin. And Johnson is over the hump again.

Comes the Nats' half of the twelfth. It's Bentley, the Giants' fourth pitcher, on the mound. One out, Ruel lifts a pop fly to Gowdy. Gowdy, set for the catch, stumbles. He has tripped over his mask. And Ruel, thus reprieved, hammers a two bagger down the leftfield foul line. Johnson hits to Travis Jackson who fumbles and Johnson reaches first, Ruel holding second. It's Earl McNeely now, and the Nats on the scent of victory.

Off McNeely's bat shoots a sharp grounder toward third. But, alas, it's directly at Lindstrom, a certain out. But no! Something happened! A funny bounce, high over Lindstrom's head! Ruel dashes home from second base. Washington wins the World Series.

And Walter Johnson?

He was kinda happy.

22 Tourneys On Maryland Golf Slate

Radical Changes Made in Method of Play at Meeting.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Feb. 11.—An attractive 22-event schedule, one of the most ambitious links programs ever attempted by an organization in this section was announced here tonight by the Maryland Golf Association. Radical changes in the methods of play in the spring and fall team matches were made by the gathering of the executive and advisory committees at the home of John V. D. Tweedy, newly elected president from the Elkridge Club.

The Maryland Open, heretofore played as a fall event, was changed to July 26 for a Washington course.

Substitute Matches.

The former spring handicap matches will be substituted for a pair of two-men teams from each member club of the association in best ball play. The two teams from each club will play at a selected course for the first-round matches, one in Washington and the other here.

The first round will be played May 8, the second May 15, at a Washington course, the third round May 22 at Baltimore, the semifinals in Washington, at Columbia, and the finals at a local course.

The schedule, in order, opens with the "Maryland golfers' handicap week" at all clubs April 30 to May 8. Winners of gross prizes in the drive for handicap cards will meet at a Baltimore course May 11.

The new two-man team play will occupy the schedule through June 5. The State women's championship will follow at Elkridge May 24 to 28. A handicap tourney will be played in the Western Maryland district May 24, with the sectional qualifying rounds for the Open the 8. The Maryland amateur at Rodgers Forge comes on June 24-25-26.

Pro-Amateur Renewed.

The combined pro-amateur tournaments will be renewed on June 8. The Maryland amateur at Rodgers Forge comes on June 24-25-26.

The 36-hole junior championship will be played at Suburban June 28, with a District club playing host to a pro-amateur on Thursday, June 30. The Junior Open will follow on July 12. The popular mixed two-ball events is on July 13.

Columbia will play host to a one ball, selective drive event on Wednesday, July 20, with half the combined handicap allowance. The Maryland Open is the next tourney, on the 26th.

The August card includes a pro-amateur at a Baltimore club on the tenth, a handicap in Cumberland on the 14th, mixed two-ball in Baltimore on the 21st, father and son in Baltimore on the 28th and the sectional qualifying for the amateur on the 30th, probably in the District.

Washington will get a best ball handicap event on September 14 and the final event, excepting the fall team matches, will be played in Baltimore Wednesday, October 12, a handicap tournament.

The dates for the fall team play have been set for September 18-25 and October second and ninth.

Bethesda Beats Montgomery Blair

Led by Hayden and Fuller, who scored seven points each, Bethesda last night defeated the Montgomery Blair basketeers, 29-28, in a close basketball battle on the Bethesda floor.

Sullivan proved the hero of the game when he hooped a foul and a field shot in the closing minutes of the game to sew up the victory.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 11.—The Skibos of Carnegie Tech crushed Georgetown's Hoyas tonight, 54 to 31, in an Eastern Intercollegiate Conference basketball game before more than 2,000 fans.

The visitors, whose play was one of the surprises of the conference's first half, were never able to overhaul the Tech team, which returned to the court after a three-weeks' mid-semester layoff. Tech was ahead 23 to 15 at the halfway mark.

Tech Coach Max Hannum cleared his bench of every reserve before the final whistle, and all but Whitey Loos, last to enter, contributed at least two points.

Combs, with 13, and Greenberg, with 12, paced the Skibos' scorers. Petroskey's 9 points were high for the visitors, who tumbled to a tie with Pitt for third place.

Columbia Girl Wins Tourney

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 11 (AP).—Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., frittered away a three-hole lead down the homestretch and had to go an extra green today to defeat Mrs. Helen Hockenjos, of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., in the finals of the Palm Beach Women's Golf tournament.

Mrs. Hockenjos, former New Jersey champion, missed winning the tournament, in fact, by the margin of a two-foot putt that failed to drop on the seventeenth green. She had won three holes in a row to square the match and the opportunity to forge ahead came when Miss Hemphill muffed a three-footer.

As it was, they halved the seventeenth and the eighteenth, and Miss Hemphill took the nineteenth with a par four. Miss Hemphill sent her chip shot dead to the pin there while Mrs. Hockenjos, short with her approach, pitched too boldly and missed coming back.

Mt. Rainier Loser To Briarley Hall

Trailing by a 24-22 count at the end of the first half, Briarley Hall's quintet came from behind to win a 38-30 victory over Mount Rainier yesterday on its home court. Lou Lodge led the victors with 23 points, keeping his team in the running during the first half.

Stockholders Accuse O'Hara Of Taking Company's Money

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Providence, R. I., Feb. 11.—A petition filed in Federal Court today on behalf of two minority stockholders asked that the Narragansett Racing Association be placed under temporary receivership and charged Walter E. O'Hara, former managing director, with "illegal and unauthorized withdrawal" of $248,122 in corporate funds.

The clerk of the court said that a subpoena was served on O'Hara earlier in the day.

Federal Judge John C. Mahoney set March 1 for a hearing on the petition, filed in behalf of William H. Eohane, of Wellesley, Mass., and Joseph Love, of New York City.

The deposed O'Hara, long a bitter enemy of Gov. Quinn, was relieved of his directorship Wednesday at a special meeting of the stockholders. He was given $25,000 to release the Narragansett Racing Association from a three-year contract.

Only yesterday did a last-minute payment of back taxes save three of O'Hara's racing stable from public auction at Hialeah Park in Florida.

With his troubles almost over, O'Hara was confronted with this new accusation today, an accusation that climaxes some six months of political and financial bickering over the control of the $3,000,000 racing plant.

Last fall Gov. Quinn dispatched a detachment of State militia, which held Narragansett in a state of siege to prevent the annual autumn meeting.

In addition to the loss of his job and his racing plant, O'Hara also lost his one other vestige of power recently when the Providence Journal, a paper owned by him, was purchased by a rival paper.

Al Tolmich Ties World HurdleMark

Philadelphia, Feb. 11.—Georgetown and Catholic University won two mile relay events at the Penn indoor carnival here tonight. Georgetown finished in 3:31 ahead of Villanova and Temple, while Catholic U. defeated West Chester Teachers and Swarthmore in 3:41.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Feb. 11.—Don Lash, Indiana's Olympic champion, who says he doesn't run his best races indoors because his stride is too long, tonight shared the limelight of Philadelphia's first indoor track meet in six years with Alan Tolmich, of Wayne University, Detroit.

Before a crowd of 3,000 persons who braved a snowy night to turn out at Convention Hall, Lash easily won the Penn A. C. mile, the feature event, in 4.22.3, coming in 80 yards ahead of second place Gerald Tarant, of Pennsylvania. Gene Venzke was a disappointment, being eliminated after the sixth lap on the miss-and-out system.

Tolmich, beaten by Olympic Champion Forrest "Spec" Towns, of Georgia, at the Millrose games in New York last week, turned the tables in the 50-yard high hurdles tonight.

Tolmich tied the world record of 6.2 seconds, set by Jack Keller, of Ohio State, in 1930, in beating Towns by two inches in the finals after the Georgia runner himself had twice equalled the record in the preliminary heats and semifinals.

Marty Glickman, of Syracuse, and Eulace Peacock, formerly of Temple, were outclassed in the 50-yard dash. Glickman was eliminated in the semifinals, while Peacock finished third in the finals won by William Wilson, of Princeton.

In the half-mile and high jump, however, the favorites won. Mel Walker, of Ohio State, cleared 6 ft. 6 in. to take the high jump, while Pete Bradley, of Princeton, captured the 880 in 1:57.8.

Cunningham Victor In New York Mile

New York, Feb. 11.—Glenn Cunningham, Kansas' master miler surged into the lead on the first lap and never was headed as he won his specialty in 4:15.2 at the seventh regiment track and field games tonight.

He won by 25 yards over Blaine Rideout, North Texas State Teachers College, who was timed at 4:18.1. Both were faster than the flat floor armory record of 4:18.2 set here by Abel Kiviat 22 years ago. Rideout finished with a 10 yard lead over Lou Burns, Manhattan College's intercollegiate mile champion. Ray Mahannan, Drake, who attempted to keep up with Cunningham all the way, tired in the last lap and finished fourth.

Jim Herbert, New York University's middle distance star, captured the 600-yard invitation in 1:14.3. He put on a dynamic burst of speed in the last lap to win by 8 yards over Charley Beethan, former Ohio State ace now representing the New York curb exchange. A. C. Beetham barely nipped Wesley Wallace, Fordham, to take second place.

In a special intersectional match relay, a New York foursome finished in 3:34.4 to turn back a quartet representing the north Texas State Teachers College. Lou Collado, George Tucknott, Jack Harley and Harold Lamb combined to win by 20 yards over the Brown twins, Elmer and Delmer, Wayne Rideout and Alvin Chrisman.

Cage Game Added.

Fort Myer and United Clay Products yesterday were added to the basketball card featuring the Heurich Brewers and Newark Pros tomorrow afternoon at the Heurich gym. The Fort Myer-United Clay game is at 2 o'clock, the pro game at 3, and Delaware and Hudson and Little Tavern will clash at 4 o'clock.

Terrapin Basketball Team Wins Over V. M. I., 43-33; Boxing Team Downs Western Maryland, 5½-2½; Student Pageant Also on Card.

By Bob Garrison.

Maryland University's athletic forces successfully celebrated "All University" night with the other groups of the student activities as the basketball and boxing teams scored impressive victories at the expense of V. M. I. and Western Maryland, respectively, last night at College Park.

Five thousand persons lined the walls of Ritchie Coliseum to witness the four-hour cavalcade of sport and intramural endeavor. The Terrapin cagers defeated V. M. I. 43-33 in the opening event, while the swing team trounced the Green Terror squad, 5½ to 2½.

The student pageant, featuring student activity of varied nature, was presented in between the athletic contests.

Boxing

Losing only in the 145-pound class and the heavyweight division, and drawing in the 155-pound bout, the Terps won their first match of the year after having lost two and tied once.

Until Maryland's heavyweight, Joe Henderson, outpaced himself and ran into several short rights to the head to lose by a technical knockout to Western Maryland's Joe O'Leair, after 1 minute and 10 seconds of the second round, it had been a parade of College Park victories, interrupted only by Jose Peralta's loss in the 145-pound class.

Maryland took a 3-0 lead when Benny Alperstein returned to his own weight class and to the win column on a third round technical knockout over Harld Martin.

Rochlin Wins Opener.

The Terrors' first victory came after Bill Bender, red-haired 145-pounder, had outboxed and outslugged Maryland's Jose Perala over the three-round route.

Acree, Andrews Draw.

George Acree, Maryland's substitute 155-pounder, and Elwood Andrews, lanky Terror middleweight, fought to a questionable three-round draw. Acree won the first round and continued his aggressive tactics throughout the bout, but was in serious trouble in both the last two rounds.

Ralph (Blackie) Pearson followed suit when he made short work of his assignment, blasting Frank Lesinski, Western Maryland 175-pounder, into submission in 1 minute and 10 seconds of the opening rounds. Pearson, moving in with a two-fisted attack, staggered his foe with the first flurry of blows, followed his prey and floored him before Referee Ed Brockman stopped the match in favor of Pearson.

Basketball

Accustomed to winning with a second half rally, the University of Maryland's Terrapin basketball team took the situation in hand mid-way in the first half last night and coasted to a 43-33 victory over the V. M. I. Cadets, in the first event on the program.

It was Waverly Wheeler, who flies through the air with the greatest of ease, who piloted the Terps to the victory over the Cadets, scoring eight times on sensational one-hand shots that saw him leave the floor from as far as 15 feet from the basket and deposit goals in rapid succession, the former Tech high athlete registered 18 points in a brilliant scoring exhibition.

Terps' Sixth Victory.

His accuracy resulted in the Terps' sixth Southern Conference victory and virtually assured them of an invitation to the eight-team tournament at Raleigh, N. C., March 3, 4 and 5.

There were other Maryland heroes, too, in the victory which saw the Terps come from behind late in the first half and go on to register their fourth straight conference.

No sooner had Wheeler begun to score than Eddie Johnson and John "Sport" McCarthy took the cue and began the most impressive passing and shooting demonstration either has displayed this season.

It happened after a pitiful case of missitis had rendered the Terps unable to score during the first 10 minutes and enabled the Cadets, led by Paul Shu, who scored three times, to take a 7-1 lead at that time.

Then just as suddenly as the clock clicked off the eleventh minute, Maryland, with Wheeler doing the scoring, caught the Lexington team, at 9-all and when Eddie "Choo-Choo" Johnson scored on a snowbird, it took an 11-9 lead, all in the one minute. It was Johnson's clever, deceptive passing that had fed the ball to Wheeler and his goal came as a reward for his co-operative play.

The lead that the Terps took at that time served them through the remainder of the game. They improved steadily and at the half-time had a 21-15 advantage.

Eastern Whips Tech, 21-12, to Take Lead; Roosevelt Defeats Central Quintet, 28-24

By Jack Munhall.

The interhigh basketball standings, which have been as uncertain as Washington's weather, underwent another revision last night as Eastern's flying five drubbed Tech, 21 to 12, to break a first place tie with idle Western. In the second game of the double-header, which drew 750 students to Tech gym, Roosevelt tightened its grip on third position with a close 28 to 24 victory over Central.

The twin bill produced two interesting games and although both favorites emerged unscathed, upsets were threatened in both encounters. Eastern, perhaps suffering a letdown after a gruelling game with St. John's Saturday or perhaps because Tech guarded the Lincoln Parker great skill, was none too in Russ Lo astern's spectacular an guard, again proved that he is the best "money" player in the series as he lead his team to a hard fought triumph. Despite the 9-point difference in the score, Tech offered Eastern as stiff a struggle as it has received in a winning contest.

Tech, relying principally on the guiding hand of Sydney Schulman, a newcomer in February, but already one of the better ball handlers and defensive performers in the series, was a threat until late in the final quarter. Neither team scored in the opening five minutes of play, as well aimed shots bounced in and then out in unbelievable number. Eastern, with Lombardy and Clint Quantrille slapping in most of the points, grabbed a 5-to-2 lead in the first period and stretched the advantage to 9 to 6 at half.

Tech faltered in the third quarter and hopes for victory vanished before a basket barrage by Quantrille who rammed in two quick field goals. Moe Tannebum, Tech's little forward, dropped in a pair of free throws and Kendall added a basket but Quantrille, probably the best foul shooter in the series, tapped in a follow shot and finished his scoring with a charity toss. Tech registered the last two markers on fouls by Charley Kendall and Eli Blank, time halted further scoring. Central's hard-luck lads stumbled into their eighth straight spanking but again made a battle of it all the way. However, its five players couldn't cope with the point output of Perlo and West who between them tickled the cords for 18 points or six less than Central made. The Mt. Pleasant quintet, still minus John Fanning, its star center, started with a rush to lead 8-7 at half but Roosevelt stirred up a mess of baskets in the third period to clinch the victory although until the very last minute of play Central was dangerous.

With 5½ minutes of the fourth period left the score smiled on Roosevelt only 22-19, but Jack Smith, the Riders new center, batted in two baskets to put the decision beyond the Central's reach.

Crosses Wire Going Away To Pay $3.10

Challenge Cup Is Second and Officiate Third Before 10,000.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 11. With Gov. Fred P. Cone, of Florida, and Mrs. Cone included in the throng of 10,000, the Miami Jockey Club today presented it's annual Charity Day program, the entire receipts of which are contributed to worthy charities of the greater Miami area. It was anticipated that upward of $25,000 would be turned over to the fund for the needy.

Of chief interest on the card was the appearance in the sixth race of Mrs. H. C. Phipps' 1936 Wood Memorial Stakes winner. Teufel, a nominee for the $50,000 Widener Cup March 5. The Diavolo 5-year-old, forced out of training not long after his Wood triumph and away from the races until this winter, scored his initial triumph since being retired. Favorite at $3.10 for two while facing inferior opposition, Teufel won eased up by five lengths. R. S. Clark's Challenge Cup was second, a length and a half before M. Lowenstein's 4-year-old maiden Officiate. Teufel covered the one mile in 1:40 under 120 pounds. Johnny Longden, who returned to the saddle today for the first time since the recent death of his mother, scored a double astride the Wheatley Stable veteran.

Teufel's last start of 1936 was at Aqueduct on June 10. He returned to action here this winter and was well beaten in his first two attempts at a comeback. He then finished second, and today broke the ice. Because of the mediocrity of his rivals and the fact that he was not extended, it was difficult to criticize his slow time or to pass judgment on the worth of his performance.

Taking the lead in the first furlong, Teufel galloped into a long lead and never was forced to extend himself thereafter. Longden was easing up in the last 50 yards. Challenge Cup always held the others safe.

Grade "C" three-year-old fillies competed in the charity day purse, a six furlong test that drew nine to the post. A very hot paddock tip was circulated on Stringalong, which had not started since last fall, but the Mrs. K. Ramsey representative's belated rush in the stretch could only gain third money. The winner turned up in the consistent Tilaana, which easily outran the field and breezed home three lengths on top to return $7.60. It was her second in a row. The almost neglected Wes finished gamely and saved second money by a head from Stringalong. The time was 1:13 flat.

Friends Defeated By Woodward Five

Hitting a steady pace throughout the second half after getting a 15-12 advantage in the first, Woodward School's quintet yesterday defeated Friends School, 30-21, in a hotly contested game. Ducey's accurate goal-tossing, which accounted for almost half of the victors' points, featured the game.

Appleton's Salary Sliced by Griffith

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 11 (U.P.).—Pete Appleton, pitcher, today signed a contract for the 1938 season with the Washington Nationals. Terms were not disclosed, but Clark Griffith, club owner, said the salary would be "a little less than last year," when Appleton won eight and lost 15 with Washington. Appleton was the twentieth Washington player to sign.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INSCOELDA (field), $4.00, $2.90, $2.30; PRADIS, $37.40, $11.30; HENRYELS PICK, $2.80.

INSCOELDA, away well, went in close pursuit of the leaders in the run out of the chute, drew clear after passing the furlong pole and opened up a winning lead through the stretch. PRADIS, away well and a keen factor all the way, finished gamely under pressure and outlasted HENRYELS PICK. The latter, quickest to begin, assumed a short lead in the early stages, but faltered when the final test came.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:31. Off 2:32. Winner, Mrs. W. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGHOMAR, $13.90, $7.20, $4.40; R. PINCHOT, $12.00, $7.90; WHOOPER, $4.00.

HIGHOMAR, going forwardly on the outside from the start, responded courageously when the final issue came and outlasted his opponents. R. PINCHOT secured clear passage on the inside leaving the backstretch, moved up gamely and assumed a brief lead within the final sixteenth mile, but faltered. WHOOPER, going well up from the start, took command midway around the turn, continued gamely when put to a drive, but was not equal to the first two.

THIRD RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:02. Off 3:04. Winner, W. H. Berri's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROAD VISION, $5.70, $3.90, $2.60; WEEKLY STIPEND, $4.10, $3.10; ETHELMONT, $3.10.

BROAD VISION, crowded back going to the first turn, trailed the field until well around the lower turn, closed steadily when placed to pressure on the extreme outside and wore WEEKLY STIPEND down in the last strides. WEEKLY STIPEND, rushed to the front while slipping through on the inside in the run down the backstretch, drew out into a clear lead at the furlong pole, but faltered. ETHELMONT, prominent contender the entire trip, held on well and outlasted ODDESA FRANK.

FOURTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:32. Off 3:32½. Winner, Mrs. L. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TONI, $6.20, $3.50, $3.00; BLACK MISCHIEF, $3.60, $3.10; RITZ BROTHERS, $6.60.

TONI, displaying improvement in form, took command at the start, was cleverly rated in front while saving ground for the entire trip and continued with determination when put to a drive and held BLACK MISCHIEF safe through the stretch. BLACK MISCHIEF, on the inside in tight quarters to the stretch turn, moved up strongly on the outside, but bore out through the stretch and was unable to overtake the winner. RITZ BROTHERS gradually bettered his position in the last half mile and finished gamely to punishment to maintain his position.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Charity Day. Class C. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:00. Off 4:02. Winner, A. F. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TILAANA, $7.60, $4.30, $2.80; WES, $52.50, $11.30; STRINGALONG, $3.00.

TILAANA, quickest to begin, set a swift pace in the early running and drew out into a long lead entering the stretch, but was kept under steady pressure to maintain her advantage. WES, vigorously urged and saving ground, bettered her position steadily and outlasted STRINGALONG. The latter, outrun early, swung to the outside in the final quarter mile and closed strong.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won eased up; place driving. Went to post 4:30. Off 4:34. Winner, Wheatley Stable's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TEUFEL, $3.10, $2.80, $2.40; CHALLENGE CUP, $7.00, $4.30; OFFICIATE, $4.00.

TEUFEL, away well, assumed command at his leisure, opened up a commanding lead rounding the turn and was taken in hand in the last quarter mile, winning eased up. CHALLENGE CUP, always in nearest pursuit of the winner, held on with good courage in the final drive. OFFICIATE, on the outside all the way, finished stoutly under pressure and outlasted KENYON C.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:02. Off 5:03. Winner, E. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KIEV'S PENNANT, $3.30, $3.70, $2.60; GEORGIA MEADEN, $20.20, $9.20; REBEL YELL, $6.70.

KIEV'S PENNANT, a trailer until midway around the lower turn, moved up rapidly between the leaders when called upon, then swinging to the outside entering the stretch, drew out in the final furlong and won in hand. GEORGIA MEADEN, under slight restraint early, took the lead entering the stretch, but was no match for the winner. REBEL YELL, under pressure all the way, outlasted BUSHMASTER in the final drive.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Satrt good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:33. Off 5:36. Winner, Mrs. K. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PALAMEDE, $17.40, $7.10, $4.90; MAECLOUD, $5.90, $3.90; BLIND PIG, $3.10.

PALAMEDE, slow to get going and a trailer in the opening half mile, moved into contention rapidly while circling the field entering the stretch, took command at the furlong pole and won as his rider pleased. MAECLOUD, pinched back twice endeavoring to slip through on the inside rounding the lower turn, closed gamely when securing clear passage and outlasted BLIND PIG. The latter displayed most early speed, but faltered in the last furlong.

This Morning

Betting on Prep Races Is Discouraged.

(While Shirley Povich is on vacation this column will be written by Walter Haight.)

By Walter Haight.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, the young man who took the hump out of the Pimlico infield, said a mouthful the other day in Los Angeles. In fact, he couldn't have said a larger mouthful had he captured the whale reported floundering in San Francisco Bay and used it as his Charlie McCarthy.

HAIGHT.

Turfically speaking, Vanderbilt was regarded as just a wealthy young man with a lot of race horses before he was made an official of the Pimlico track. Since that time, many persons, longer in the sport than Vanderbilt, but lacking his sincere enthusiasm and his modern ideas, have found it profitable to listen when he has something to say.

Here's an Associated Press dispatch from California: "Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, owner of a noted Maryland stable, advocated today a change in American racing rules to prevent pari-mutuel betting on horses entered in a race simply for training.

"Horses preparing for a big stake event occasionally are in need of actual competition," Vanderbilt said, "but the betting public should be notified if the horses are entered for a 'prep.'

"If such a horse wins it should receive the wminer's share of the purse, but the pari-mutuel payoff should be restricted to second, third and fourth horses, assuming these were making determined effort," Vanderbilt said.

In the first place, it is healthy to hear of an owner of a pretentious racing stable even mention "betting." Many of the wealthy owners, credited with being "the backbone of the sport," never, never, never mention the wagering angle. They talk of the breeding farm, beautiful Saratoga, conformation of horses and clubhouse gossip, but most of them act as if betting were just a "horrid subsidiary" of the sport.

Mr. Two Buck Racefan, truly the backbone of racing, can't recall that Hokus Pokus won the thirty-first running of the Forgetful Stakes at Belmont and that he was bred on E. Plotemus Martin's farm in the famous White Valley but he can tell you what Hokus Pokus paid when he won his maiden race at Bowie—and to the dime!

• • • •

Vanderbilt, who seldom bets, was not speaking for himself when he advocated a method to keep the public from wasting money on horses sent on the track only for conditioning purposes.

Perhaps Vanderbilt ran into a movie star, who, like "We, The People," has been burned by wagering on a big name horse at even money and watching him make not the slightest semblance of trying to win.

There is nothing new about "giving a horse race" or a "prep." Many trainers, honest to the core as far as refraining from stimulation and unfair racing methods in general, think nothing of sending a horse onto the track for the sole purpose of "tightening" him for other races.

Many of the turf regulars anticipate these "conditioning" efforts and look elswhere in the entries before they bet. However, the occasional turf fan, seeing the big name horse and his imposing record in the past performances, often goes for him in a big wagering way, much to his sorrow. When the big stake race comes along, the occasional fan judges the big name horse on his "prep" race and is left holding the bag again.

I doubt if the trainer's instructions to the jockey in these cases is "don't let this one get close." However, he probably says, "Win with this one if you can but don't abuse him." When the stake race comes along and the jockey is free to "abuse" the horse he generally improves many lengths.

Ask an official about Windbag's poor performance and he probably will tell you in an offhand way, "Windbag needed that race." Horsemen will say, "Windbag will improve off that effort." even if they, too, lost a bet on him.

It is noticeable that Vanderbilt did not advocate the elimination of these "prep" efforts. Horses like Seabiscuit and War Admiral do not need "conditioning" races. They are of the type that fit themselves in workouts or trials. However, some horses will not extend themselves in trials and will not do their best until after they have had real racing.

• • • •

Under Vanderbilt's plan, horses being "tightened" would be designated on the program. Unscrupulous trainers probably would find a way to abuse this method, but it would give the honest horseman a chance to be level with the public.

There is an unwritten law in racing circles, unfamiliar to racegoers. Two-year-old horses may be run as the trainer chooses until they win. While officials seldom admit this, they accept it.

Many of the larger stables often run a horse that is being "prepped" with a "trying stablemate." This gives the public a break, because they are at least getting half a run for their money. Occasionally, an owner with a two-horse entry will "declare" with one of the horses. This is the equivalent of a public announcement that the other horse is being handled as the trainer chooses and cannot be expected to win.

'Chuck' Norton Lost to Terps

Maryland University's basketball team won and lost on the court last night when it triumphed in its sixth Southern Conference game was deprived of the services of its ace center, Charlie (Chuck) Norton, at the same time.

While the Terps were winning their way into the conference tourney at Raleigh, N. C., next month, with a 43-33 victory over V. M. I., word reached Coach Burton Shipley that the services of Norton would be denied the team for the remainder of the season.

Norton, Ogden, Utah, sophomore, whose sensational scoring during the College Parkers' first 12 games netted him 146 points and the District scoring lead, was placed on scholastic probation for an indefinite period by the Board of Student Guidance, Admissions and Adjustments at a special session yesterday.

Norton had completed two "incomplete" grades and one condition and had applied for admission for the February-June semester when the board voted to admit him on the probation basis.

Director of Athletics Geary Eppley said that Norton would remain in school and his chances of reporting for the Terp baseball team depended on how long the probation period remained in effect. Norton is a pitcher and has been offered professional contracts by two major league teams.

Columbus U. Boxers Win

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Columbus University's potent ring team inaugurated its 1938 campaign in striking style last night, knocking out six DeSales College representatives and outpointing two others in chalking up an 8-0 victory.

A distinguished audience of 1,000 fans, including Marty Gallagher and Natie Brown, saw the fisticuffing at Turner's Arena.

Stacked in a neat pile, the visitors would have resembled a double order of hot cakes (butter extra) in any downtown restaurant. Only one, Joe Wright, failed to hit the deck, and he wobbled precariously several times while losing to Ray Morse in the featherweight argument.

It remained for the final bout to supply the evening's biggest thrill, however. Jim Brown, Columbus heavyweight, put the snooze on Buddy Brazzil after 25 seconds of the third round of a hectic brawl.

Navy Faces A Busy Day

Teams Will Engage in Six Varsity Events.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Feb. 11.—Navy presents its biggest sport program of the winter season, up to this point, tomorrow, reaching its acme in the boxing with the University of Virginia in the evening.

The ring match with Virginia, the only team which holds an edge in the series with Navy, is regarded as the big event of the home season.

The basketball game with Virginia Military Institute will be of special interest due to the near approach of the Army game and another contest which is exciting keen interest is the wrestling match with the University of Indiana, one of the strong teams of the Middle West.

Other varsity events are swimming with the University of Pennsylvania, Navy's first match this season in the tank; fencing with Yale, and a small-bore rifle match with Lehigh.

The plebes play basketball with Eastern High, of Washington, meet the Pennsylvania freshmen in the tank and the frosh of Virginia Military Institute in wrestling.

The time of the varsity events and opponents are:

1:30 p. m. (Rifle)—Lehigh University.

2:00 p. m. (Fencing)—Yale University.

2:30 p. m. (Basketball)—Virginia Military Institute.

3:30 p. m. (Swimming)—University of Pennsylvania.

4:00 p. m. (Wrestling)—University of Indiana.

7:30 p. m. (Boxing)—University of Virginia.

Virginia Union Bows to Howard

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 11.—Howard University basketball team decisively defeated Virginia Union University, 63-4. At half time the Union Panthers held the lead 27-24. Soup Campbell leading the Panthers during the first half with some very fine shooting. Howard came back in the second half like a house afire and three in baskets from all points. Wynne the sensational Bison forward led the Bisons throughout the game, his total for the evening being 24 points. For the Panthers Campbell scored 17 points. Gwaltney of Howard was runner-up with eleven points.

Galento Draws N. Y. Suspension

Elizabethtown Five Defeats Gallaudet

Gallaudet College's quintet dropped a 48-36 decision to Elizabethtown (Pa.) Teachers last night in a hard fought game. Racy Drake's brilliant performance, which accounted for 14 points, was outstanding for the Blues.

Upsets Mark 'Frisco' Play

San Francisco, Feb. 11 (AP).—Defeat of the medalist, a series of long distance battles and some rousing upsets marked the first and second rounds of the $5,000 San Francisco match play Open Golf tournament today.

The upsets started with the opening round when Charles Congdon, Tacoma, Wash., who set the pace for the qualifiers with a two-day score of 148, was knocked out of competition by Leonard Ott, of Denver.

Other second-round winners were Jimmy Demaret, Houston, Tex.; Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y.; Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa.; Lawson Little, San Francisco; Tony Penna, Dayton, Ohio; Sam Snead, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and Craig Wood, Rumson, N. J.

Demaret advanced with a 2 and 1 victory over Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J. Runyan walloped Harold McSpaden, Winchester, Mass., 4 and 3, Picard edged out Mark Fry, Oakland, on the twentieth.

Little, one time amateur champion and winner of the San Francisco Open a year ago, smeared Jimmy Hines, Garden City, N. Y., 5 and 3, after a narrow escape in the first round when he was carried to the nineteenth hole by Paul Jopes, La Habra, Calif.

In the Independent Ladies League Mary Sperber, of Budget Bureau, took high game, with 133; Maureen Morrison, Pepco No. 1, high set, with 342; Coast-ins high team game, with 558 and Budget Bureau high team set, with 1560.

I Streeters Well Checked By Tall Foes

Losers Score Only Point in First and Third Periods.

By Jack Munhall.

Restricting a smaller Gonzaga five to put one point in the first and third periods, Western High School's towering team gave one of its best performances of the season yesterday to whip the I Streeters, 33-25, before a capacity crowd at the Western gym.

The game was not as close as the 8-point margin indicates, for Gonzaga was so tickled to see the Western reserves in the last quarter that it rolled up 17 points in little more than five minutes while holding Western to only 5.

Western, with the regular team of Bob Holloran, Bob Custer, Len Stanton, Irving Needle and Tom Saylor clicking, outclassed the purple-clad invaders to amass a 11-1 lead in the first quarter and boost the ample advantage to 20-7 at half. The whole team figured in the point making as pick-off plays consistently left a man open beneath the basket and few baskets were missed.

In the first half, Gonzaga's attack sputtered and died on wild passes and wilder shooting although its tricky set offense frequently opened holes in the Western offense. Time and again a player would slip through for a snowbird but only once did Gonzaga score on a "cripple."

In the final period after Cliff Moore had cleaned the Western bench of substitutes, Gonzaga settled down and for the first time exhibited the play of which it is capable. With Jerry Connolly and Chip Collins, diminutive but speedy forwards, teaming with the hulking Lane O'Donnell, it ate into Western's lead with gulping bites but the 28-8 margin that the regulars bequeathed the reserves was too much to overcome in so short a time.

Connolly with 6, and O'Donnell and Collins with 4, accounted for most of Gonzaga's points. Buddy O'Brien and Collins also chipped in with outstanding floor games.

Turiello in Public Ring Drill Today At Turner's Arena

Saverio Turiello, the Italian welterweight and the fourth ranking contender for the title, will be exhibited before the public this afternoon at 2 o'clock at Turner's Arena where he is scheduled to indulge in a workout. You are cordially invited to attend.

Turiello, a honest-to-goodness scrapper, is putting the finishing touches to preparations for his bout with Johnny Lucas Monday night at the same Arena. Lucas is not expected in town until Monday, as it might cramp Signor Turiello's style to have both on the scene. The Italian, however, promises to cramp Lucas' style plenty Monday night.

Meanwhile, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn has added Bobby Wilson and "Toots" Bernstein to the card for an eight-round semi-final. It will be Wilson's first appearance in a local ring since he catapulted to popularity at the old Riding Academy Arena.

Georgetown Prep Five Wins, 21 to 11

Kelley, center, led the Georgetown attack with 9 points. Wimsatt was second high scorer for the winners with 5 points. Holmes scored 5 for the losers.

Sports Postscripts

A recent visitor to the Hilltop was FRANK GARGAN, who coached the Georgetown football teams from 1911-1913 . . . He was here for a dental clinic, and took delight in remembering the games the Hoyas played in those years with the tricky Carlisle Indians . . . He called HARRY COSTELLO, now a sports writer on a local sheet, the greatest little gridman he's ever seen . . . HARRY weighed all of 128 pounds! . . . At least one local athlete is expected to attend the newest ROBERT TAYLOR picture scheduled for a local downtown theater next week . . . The handsome one is cast as a member of a college crew and that's enough to make ROBERT TAYLOR, 135-pound member of the Colmor Manor Boys' Club basketball team, yearn to see how his namesake looks in action . . .

According to HARRY RASKIN, this NATIE BROWN just can't be figured . . . Every time he's apparently all washed up, he springs a big surprise and then is good for several more bouts . . . His recent knockout of LORENZO PACK, Detroit Negro, can't be taken too seriously, however, for most of PACK's bouts end with either him or his opponent on the floor, anyway . . . HARRY is calling the turn on the JIMMY ADAMICK-BROWN fight, saying that BROWN can lick any heavyweight in the world, except BOB TOW . . . That's HARRY's bread and butter, and he likes butter . . . The tapless basketball game is certainly making a difference in the Eastern Conference scores . . . In three of the first 14 games played this year, the winning team has tallied 50 or more points, while in last season's total batch of 30 games only one team scored that many . . . The average score for both teams this season is 77 as against 66 last year.

Elder boys who futilely try to halt his cagey dribbling and accurate shooting will be surprised to learn that JOEY GALLAGHER, the St. John's Prep School guard, is only 16 years old . . . He will be back next year and if he improves, COACH GENE AUGUSTEFER, won't have to supply him with but two or three teammates . . . Two-ton TONY GALENTO claims he even drinks milk and orange juice and says he goes to bed at night . . . But he doesn't say what time . . . You can look for VAN MUNGO, the Brooklyn pitcher, to be traded by the Dodgers before the season opens . . . The denials from the front office are the tip-off.

Three Local Shows Listed

G.W., C.U., Terp Teams in Competition Tonight.

Two basketball games and one swing session comprise the Saturday night entertainments that will bring to a close the busiest week to date on the winter college sports program.

George Washington, Maryland and Catholic University basketball teams are listed for performances tonight, as is the Cardinal boxing team. Still another member of the local cast, Georgetown sends its basketball representatives against West Virginia U. at Morgantown.

Feature of tonight's action will be the George Washington University-Wayne basketball game, set for Tech High at 8:30 p. m., pushed closely for the leading role by the Catholic University-Villanova boxing matches at the Brookland Gym at the same time.

The Maryland-Catholic U. basketball game at College Park is also expected to attract a sizeable gathering.

George Washington will be seeking their ninth victory in their twelfth start at the expense of the strong Wayne University from Detroit, which will be seeking a return victory over the local club. In Detroit recently G. W. eked out a 3-point triumph over the Tartars.

The Catholic University boxing team faces its hardest test of the season tonight, when it clashes with Villanova University's Wildcat fighters.

The feature of the match is slated to come as the heavyweight bout, which will see large Leo Katalinas, Cardinal 230-pounder, matched against a man his own size. Ed Killian, who stands 6 ft. 4 in., is expected to outweigh the knockout specialist by 10 pounds, and according to LaFond promises to be "Kat's" most dangerous foe.

The Catholic University basketball team will be seeking its third triumph of the season when it journeys to College Park to play the recent qualifiers for the Southern Conference tourney, the Maryland Terps.

Sports in Brief

THESZ BEATEN.

S. M. A. BOXERS LOSE.

Charlottesville, Va.—A hard-hitting University of Virginia freshman boxing team held the Staunton Military Academy's undefeated team to a 4-to-4 draw here tonight.

RODAK WINS.

Memphis, Tenn.—Leo Rodak, Chicago featherweight, who is running for a title fight with Champion Henry Armstrong, tonight won a 10-round decision over Al Manriques, of Mexico.

Ten Eyck, Famous Syracuse University Rowing Coach, Ex-Navy Mentor, Dies

By the Associated Press.

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 11.—James A. Ten Eyck, the 86-year-old rowing coach at Syracuse University whose name has been synonymous with rowing since the turn of the century, died today in Miami, Fla.

A veteran of 74 years, Ten Eyck was born at Tompkins Cove on the Hudson River, October 16, 1851, not far from the scene of the annual Intercollegiate regatta. To the end a salty and sturdy character, Ten Eyck recently told one of his old oarsmen he did not expect to survive the severe strain which coronary thrombosis had put on his heart. He was ill for three weeks.

For 35 years Ten Eyck coached rowing at Syracuse. Last June at Poughkeepsie he was the last of the old order of professional oarsmen still in command. Pop Courtney, Jim Wray and Dick Glendon had all passed from the fraternity of head coaches. Only "the grand old man" was left.

He began rowing in his early teens. His racing career took him to every section of the United States and to England where he was a famous figure in the now-gone days of single sculls.

His early coaching days in the '80's were spent with boat clubs and in 1889 and 1901 he coached the U. S. Naval Academy crews at Annapolis.

He came to Syracuse in 1903 and began a 35-year reign as a crew coach, marked throughout by the affection he showed for his oarsmen and which he received in turn from them.

1904, only a yea rafter he took charge, both his varsity and freshman crews won at Poughkeepsie. The varsity won again in 1908, 1913, 1916 and 1920 and his yearling boat repeated in 1906, 1915, 1922, 1925, 1929, 1930 and 1932. His jayvee boats won five Poughkeepsie races.

Ten Eyck chewed tobacco, loved old baggy clothing and would wrap himself in cold-stiffened oilskins to stand in his boat, icicles hanging from his mustaches, and bark orders to husky young oarsmen.

Once he said "if I had to go ten miles, I'd rather row than walk." In recent years at his West Southport, Me., summer camp the "old man" thought nothing of a seven to ten mile row.

Both of Jim's sons, James, jr., and Ned, are crew coaches and both have been aides on his staff. Old Jim turned a hand from 1913 to 1916 to help son Jim develop national amateur champion crews at the Duluth, Minn., Boat Club.

James, jr., is now at Princeton and Ned, former Rutgers coach, for the past several years has helped at Syracuse with winter and early spring conditioning work. He is the number one choice to take over the main coaching task for the Orange.

In 1917, just to prove he still could row, old Jim rowed from Syracuse to Albany and down the Hudson to New York.

James jr. and Ned were sons from his first marriage. His second marriage was to Miss Olivia Randall, one-time Syracuse University professor, at Mt. Vernon, Iowa on October 10, 1918.

At the opening of the 1937 rowing season a new boathouse and crew quarters was opened on historic Long Branch named the "James A. Ten Eyck Memorial Boathouse." He protested against the word "memorial" with good humored vehemence.

He had looked forward to the approaching rowing season with hopes of developing a championship crew and insisted that son Ned remain behind to conduct training even while he fought his final illness.

Dogmatic, he would say "there's only one way to row and that's the right way."

Once before, when "old Jim" was very sick and many believed he could not survive, his wife finally told him he had pneumonia.

"Why didn't you tell me it was pneumonia," he snapped. "I thought I had a cold. I'll be all right, now that I know."

He was.

Ten Eyck's body will arrive in Syracuse Sunday and services will be at 2 p. m. Tuesday in Hendricks Chapel at Syracuse University.

Washington Business 3% Below Normal

January Volume Is 7% Under December, 7% Below Year Ago.

New York, Feb. 11.—Business in Washington at the end of January stood at 3 per cent below normal, a loss of 7 per cent from December, 1937, and 7 per cent under January, 1937, according to the monthly survey of business conditions in 147 trading areas of the United States by Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, New York and Detroit advertising concern.

"Although there was a general decline in business activity in January, 16 trading areas in the country were able to show a gain over their December level," the report says. "A small group of these are located in the agricultural district of the Northwest, where resistance to the decline is most noticeable. Nine other areas resisted the doctrine, at least to the point of remaining at their December level. Out of a total of 147 areas, 122 registered declines."

The national business index declined 4 per cent in January, dropping to 33 per cent below normal. This compares with 5 per cent below normal a year ago and 21 per cent below normal two years ago. The greatest January gains, with indexes improving 1 per cent or more over December, were registered in the following areas:

Aberdeen, Akron, Beaumont, Fargo, Fort Wayne, Joplin, Louisville, Miami, Minneapolis, Minot, Portland, Oreg., Sioux City, Sioux Falls, St. Joseph, Mo., and Wilmington, Del.

District of Columbia Store Sales.

Sales in seven Washington department stores in January declined 2.4 per cent, compared with a year ago, the Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. This drop compares with a gain of 7.5 per cent in January a year ago over January, 1936.

The Washington record was not up to the average for the whole fifth district, sales in 56 department stores in January, 1938, averaging 1 per cent more in dollar amount than sales in January, 1937. This gain compares with an average decrease of 4 per cent in 536 stores in the United States, the report says.

Of the 56 reporting stores in the fifth district, 31 reported larger and 25 smaller sales in January, 1938, than in January, 1937.

Peoples Drug Dividends.

Directors of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., yesterday declared the regular dividend of $1.62½ on the preferred stock, payable March 15 to stockholders of record on March 1. The regular dividend of 25 cents on the common was also declared, payable April 1 to holders of record March 8.

Cotton Steady; March at 8.71

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—Cotton ruled steady today as the trade awaited Senate action on the farm bill. May recovered from 8.77 to 8.83 and closed at 8.81, with final prices 2 to 6 points net higher.

Prices moved over a narrow range during the greater part of the day. This inaction was regarded as indicating the previous rally of about $1.50 a bale had discounted the status of the farm bill to date.

Wheat Yields In Pre-Holiday Transactions

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 11.—With a double holiday starting tomorrow, wheat traders showed a pronounced disposition to keep to the sidelines today, and the market went fractionally downhill.

About the sole supporting influence for wheat values here was export purchasing of 400,000 bushels of North American wheat, partly Canadian. There was sharp notice taken that Australian shipments to overseas were much larger than either last week or a year ago.

Possibilities of moisture relief for dry districts of United States winter crop territory were a factor that as well as increased supplies from Australia tended to bring about wheat price setbacks. One estimate figured Australia could export 17,500,000 bushels more wheat than at this time last year.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ¼ to ⅝ under yesterday's finish, May, 94⅝ to 94¾; July 90½ to 90⅝; corn unchanged to ¼ up, May 59⅞ to 60, July 61; oats unchanged to ⅛ off; rye ½ to ¾ down, and provisions unchanged to 10 cents lower.

Westen Union Net Half of Last Year

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—Western Union Telegraph Co. reported today preliminary net income for 1937 of $3,325,769 after charges but before provision for Federal surtax on undistributed profits, equal to $3.18 a share of capital stock, compared with $7,199,120, or $6.89 a share in 1936.

Bituminous Production.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended February 5 as approximately 7,600,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1937, 9,903,000 tons; 1936, 10,124,000 tons.

Market, Prey of Inertia, Lags In Dullest Session in 3 Years

Steel and Railroad Shares Advance at the Opening but Later Yield to Lack of Interest; Bonds Firm.

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Feb. 11.—Stock market leaders crawled through the slowest session in three years today and most were moderately lower at the sleepy close. Transfers totaled 387,210 shares, the smallest volume for a 5-hour day since February 15, 1935. It compared with 613,760 shares yesterday. The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off .2 of a point at 43.8.

With tomorrow a holiday for the stock exchange, most traders remained in neutral territory and the ticker tape merely crept throughout the proceedings.

There was little from Washington to sharpen either the buying or selling appetite and news from the business front, while not especially disturbing, lacked speculative inspiration. Unconfirmed reports of unrest in Germany, it was said, served mainly to promote wariness in boardrooms and was hardly considered a prime market influence.

Steels and rails led the list on a forward tilt at the opening. Early advances running to a point or so, though, were soon reduced or cancelled and no real attempt was subsequently made to rally the list.

The major steel stocks received some support on forecasts further price cuts were unlikely and that pent-up buying might make its appearance when it was believed the bottom had been reached.

Rail Shares Hold Up.

Carriers did fairly well most of the day, again being under the influence of optimism concerning a possible favorable freight rate decision. Last week's freight loadings also were up more than seasonally, it was disclosed, although some 100,000 cars under the same week a year ago.

Union oil of California, with 1937 net almost double that of 1936, held a gain of more than a point at 20½. On the other hand Allis Chalmers shaved its dividend and the stock lost 1⅜ at 42⅝.

On the downside were National Steel at 55, General Motors 34⅛, Sears Roebuck 59, Allied Chemical 159½, Union Carbide 73½, American Smelting 48¼, International Harvester 63½, Westinghouse 95 and U. S. Gypsum 65½.

Retaining advances were U. S. Steel at 53¼, Bethlehem 55⅝, Chrysler 55¼, American Can 81, Johns-Manville 76½, American Radiator 13¼, Standard Oil of California 31½ and Anaconda 32.

The French franc was strong in terms of the dollar and sterling pushed higher.

Rail Bonds Higher.

Rail bonds continued in a recovery swing today, although extreme gains were reduced by late profit selling. Industrial and Utility issues had no definite trend. U. S. Governments, after early indecision, moved ahead for gains ranging to 8-32nds of a point.

In some relatively inactive carrier loans rallying tendencies met no resistance and closing prices showed sizable gains. A few other thin markets were revealed through sharp losses.

The Associated Press average of 20 rail bonds rose .3 of a point to 65.1, representing an even 3-point rise from the January low. The industrial average and utility average each improved .1 of a point. Transactions totaled $6,340,125 against $6,722,325 yesterday.

Weakness in German government dollar loans was attributed by traders to rumors of political unrest in the Reich. Italian and Polish issues strengthened, while Cuban 5½s lost ground on news the proposed public works debt liquidation plan met an executive veto.

Corporate issues closing higher included New York Central 5s at 68¼, up 1¼; Nickel Plate 4½s at 51½, up 1; Chicago & North Western 4¾s at 6, up ½; Columbia Gas & Electric 5s at 93, up 1¾; Great Northern 4½s at 86, up ⅛; Baltimore & Ohio 4½s at 27½, up ⅞. On the loss side were loans of Western Union, U. S. Rubber, Studebaker, and Alleghany Corporation.

African Fruit Here, First in 17 Years

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—South African fruit appeared in New York produce markets today for the first time in 17 years. Absence had been due to a plant disease quarantine.

Received here from South Africa was a shipment of 1,760 boxes of plums and 95 boxes of peaches. The fruit was shipped to England and reshipped to the United States.

The plums, the Gaviota variety, sold at $2.20 top per box of 32 plums, and the peaches, the Peregin variety, brought $2 per box of 24.

Freight Traffic Gains in Week, Down for Year

Total of 564,740 Cars for Feb. 5 Week Is 15.9% Under Year Ago.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended February 5 totaled 564,740 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was a decrease of 106,487 cars or 15.9 per cent below the corresponding week in 1937 and a decrease of 334,095 cars or 37.2 per cent below the same week in 1930. Loading of revenue freight for the week of February 5 was an increase of 11,564 cars or 2.1 per cent above the preceding week.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 204,444 cars, an increase of 5,108 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 59,760 cars below the corresponding week in 1937.

Coal loading amounted to 129,394 cars, an increase of 50 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 26,102 cars below the corresponding week in 1937.

Grain Loadings Higher.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 32,282 cars, an increase of 671 cars above the preceding week, and 4,071 cars above the corresponding week in 1937. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week of February 5 totaled 19,710 cars, an increase of 506 cars above the preceding week, and 2,403 cars above the corresponding week in 1937.

Livestock loading amounted to 11,455 cars, a decrease of 1,435 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 768 cars above the corresponding week in 1937. In the Western districts alone, loading of livestock for the week of February 5 totaled 8,418 cars, a decrease of 1,427 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 557 cars above the corresponding week in 1937.

Forest products loading totaled 28,259 cars, an increase of 1,500 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 6,336 cars below the corresponding week in 1937.

Joint Land Banks Are 60% Liquidated

Since May, 1933, when the joint stock land banks went into liquidation as required by law, they have disposed of about 60 per cent of their assets, and so far have retired 66 per cent of their outstanding bonds and notes payable. This was stated yesterday by W. E. Rhea, deputy land bank commissioner.

When the joint stock land banks were placed in liquidation by Congress in 1933 there were 46 banks in operation under their own management and three in receivership. Since that date 3 of the 46 banks have completed liquidation and 2 have been placed in receivership. Total assets of the 46 banks in operation May 1, 1933, were $492,638,952, and total assets of the 41 banks remaining in operation December 31, 1937, were $195,790,575.

Steel Corp. Shipments Rise After Long Decline

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—Shipments of finished steel products in January by United States Steel Corporation subsidiaries totaled 518,322 tons, compared with 489,070 in December and 1,149,918 in January, 1937, the company reported today.

Showing the first month-to-month increase since early in 1937, the January shipments ran 29,252 tons above December. They were, however, down 631,596 tons from January, 1937.

Building 19.4% Below Year Ago

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—Easing of residential and non-residential building activity dropped new construction awards in January 19.4 per cent under last year, and to the lowest level in 11 months, F. W. Dodge Corporation, building statisticians, reported to the Department of Commerce in Washington today.

Contracts awarded in 37 States east of the Rocky Mountains for all types of building in January totaled $195,472,000, against $209,452,000 in December, and $242,719,000 in January, 1937, the corporation reported.

The drop in the aggregate was registered despite increased public utility and public works projects.

Aluminum Shares Jump on N.Y. Curb

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—Wide advances in a few industrial issues enlivened an otherwise quiet and narrow curb market today.

Bidding touched a few issues which had moved up sharply in the previous session, particularly Aluminum, Ltd., and Aluminum Co. of America. Today the former rose 6½ to 90 and the latter 2½ to 80.

United Shipyards "A" closed at 6⅞, up 1⅛; Diamond Shoe 16, up 2; American Cyanamid "B" 24⅝, up ⅝; Gulf Oil 39⅝, up ⅝; Sherwin Williams 86¼, up ¼. Most leaders showed minor changes.

Transactions totaled 94,000 shares against 113,000 yesterday.

Municipal Financing.

New York, Feb 11 (AP).—New financing scheduled for next week by 2 States and 39 municipalities totals $6,700,583, compared with the revised total of $44,168,452 for the past week, the Bond Buyer stated today. Weekly average of new offerings for the year to date now stands at $24,926,365.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 11.—Unsettled European conditions restricted trading in the stock market, but prices recovered somewhat in the late part of the session and the tone was about steady. Domestic rail shares sold off on disappointing dividend declarations and transatlantic securities were also heavy. British funds continued to move forward, while oils and mining issues remained quiet. Tobacco and rayon issues were in supply.

Paris.—Government bonds moved higher. Rentes advanced 5 to 55 centimes and Bank of France issue gained 90 francs. The International section was heavy, with Suez Canal and Royal Dutch closing lower.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures reacted 3d to ⅝d net, on cheaper Canadian and Australian offers and reports of improved weather in the American Southwest. Prices rallied near the close on covering. Cotton futures rallied in sympathy with firmness at Bombay and the continent and local traders also bought, but some profit-taking appeared and prices closed 2 points higher.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

By the Associated Press.

The position of the Treasury February 9:

Receipts, $73,978,638.17; expenditures, $73,363,369.20; balance, $3,006,307,890.66; customs receipts for the month, $7,767,-102.65.

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $3,607,960,210.20; expenditures, $4,642,-494,890.30, including $1,236,611,629.66 of emergency expenditures; excess of expenditures, $944,534,685.10; gross debt, $37,564-540,143.03, an increase of $2,189,031.92 above the previous day; gold assets, $12,-786,976,897.79, including $1,223,236,907.23 of inactive gold.

Business Failures Drop.

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—Business failures in the United States for the week ended February 3 dropped to 256 from 321 in the previous week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. A year ago failures totaled 194.

Freight Carloadings At Three-Year Low

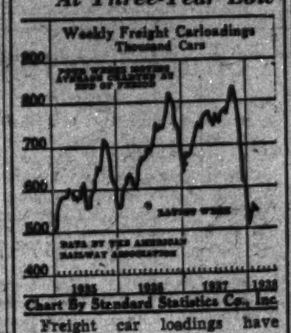

Chart By Standard Statistics Co., Inc.

Freight car loadings have fallen off to a point which cancels all the gains of the past three years, bringing them to the level prevailing in the spring of 1935. Considering present prospects of continued low industrial activity, it is probable that first quarter car loadings will be around 15 per cent below those of the first quarter of 1937.

Am. Can's Net $6.08 a Share

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—American Can Company, and subsidiaries, reported today net profit of $17,927,833 for the year ended December 31, 1937, equal to $6.08 a share on the common stock after dividend requirements on the 7 per cent preferred. This compares with $17,226,845, or $5.80 a share on the common, in 1936.

Allis-Chalmers.

Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. directors today ordered a dividend of 37½ cents a share on the common stock, payable March 31 to holders of record March 11. Last year the company paid 50 cents in March and June, $1 in September and $1.50 in December. Sales booked in 1937 totaled $94,778,846 after year-end adjustments, an increase of 45 per cent over the $65,289,107 booked in 1936, the company reported. Bookings in the final 1937 quarter were $15,769,510, a decrease of 8 per cent under the $17,148,179 for the like 1936 quarter.

Childs Restaurants.

Childs Company, chain restaurant operators, reported consolidated net profit of $421,801 for the year ended December 31, 1937, equal to 49 cents a share of common stock outstanding after dividend requirements on the preferred stock. This compares with $291,138 in 1936, equal to 9 cents a share.

Minneapolis-Honeywell.

Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co., maker of temperature control apparatus with plants in Minneapolis and Philadelphia, reported for 1937 consolidated net profit of $2,929,249 after Federal surtax, equal to $4.52 a share on the common stock. This compared with $3,082,361, or $4.77 a share in 1936.

U. S. Gypsum.

U. S. Gypsum Co., reported consolidated net profit for 1937 of $5,421,010 after Federal surtax, equal to $4.08 a common share, against $5,328,113, or $4.01 a share in 1936.

Yellow Truck.

Year's Factory Output Excessive

New York, Feb. 11.—The quality of goods manufactured during the first 11 months of 1937 was well in excess of normal for the full year, as measured by farm income and the level of manufactured goods prices, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. When the output figure for December becomes available, it will probably show that the excess for the full year was the largest on record.

This excess follows an excess in 1936, which was greater than in 1929. This makes the outlook especially unfavorable, since the prospective 1938 normal will be considerably below that of 1937. The normal for the volume of output, however, will not be as low as the normal for the value of output since part of the reduction in value will be accounted for by a drop in the price level of manufactured goods.

Dividends Omitted By Two Corporations

New York, Feb. 11.—Directors of Michigan Steel Tube Products deferred action on the common dividend due at this time. Payments of 25 cents were made in March and June last year and 50 cents in September and December.

Pennsylvania Gas & Electric Corporation omitted the dividend on the Class "A" common stock. Previous payment was 37½ cents quarterly on December 1. The regular quarterly disbursements of $1.75 each were ordered on the $7 preferred and 7 per cent preferred stock, both payable April 1 to holders of record March 21.

Building Permits Double Year Ago

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—A rush in New York City to get under the wire before a new building code became effective January 27 lifted the total of building permits issued in leading cities last month, Dun & Bradstreet today.

The total for 215 cities, the agency said, was $146,849,695, an increase of 23.7 per cent over the December figure of $118,716,151 and more than double the January, 1937, total of $68,542,828. New York City accounted for $106,072,040, compared with $74,818,104 in December and only $12,639,272 in the comparable month last year.

Morgan Stanley Lead in Year's Underwriting

E. B. Smith & Co. Second for 1937, Dillon, Read & Co. Third.

The Securities and Exchange Commission made public statistical data relating to the underwriting and distribution in 1937 of securities registered under the securities act of 1933 covering a total of $1,754,128,000. Most of the data was based on issues where the amount offered was $1,000,000 or more. The activities of New York City and firms outside New York City were segregated.

The total amount of such issues managed by New York City firms was listed as $1,532,389,000, Morgan Stanley & Co. leading with $814,128,000, Edward B. Smith & Co., second, $118,362,000, and Dillon, Read & Co., third, $105,325,000.

Group Participations.

Morgan Stanley & Co. also led in the amount it purchased in group participations with $112,684,000; Edward B. Smith & Co. was second, $109,616,000, and the First Boston Corporation, third, $109,581,000.

Mellon Securities Corporation led in the purchase of participations by firms outside New York City, with $47,399,000; Halsey, Stuart & Co. was second, $25,125,000, and W. E. Hutton & Co., Inc., third, $24,865,000.

Data concerning gross underwriting spreads dealt with bond issues of $5,000,000 or over. Weighted by the dollars of gross proceeds of each issue, this spread was 2.05 per cent of the public offering price in the third quarter of 1936, 2.12 per cent in the last quarter of 1936; 2.22 per cent in the first quarter of 1937, 2.05 per cent in the second quarter, 2.01 per cent in the third quarter and 2.21 per cent in the final quarter.

N. Y. Life Co Assets Exceed Two Billion

New York, Feb. 11.—Policyholders and beneficiaries of the New York Life Insurance Co. were paid over $191,000,000 in 1937, bringing the total for the past ten years to over $2,000,000,000, Thomas A. Buckner, chairman, announced today.

New life insurance issued during the year was $477,000,000, an increase of $26,000,000 over 1936. Insurance in force on December 31, 1937 aggregated $6,770,000,000, a gain of $109,000,000 over the close of 1936. Assets on December 31 were $2,520,000,000, an increase of $116,000,000 during the year. Included in the assets are United States Government, direct, or fully guaranteed bonds amounting to $512,000,000. This item is $72,000,000 greater than at the end of 1936 and now accounts for about 20 per cent of the total assets.

New England Mutual Record.

Boston, Feb. 10.—New insurance in the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co. in 1937 totaled $156,642,000, larger than any other year, George Willard Smith, president, said in the company's annual report today. Insur

George F. Getz, Coal Magnate, Dies in Florida

Rich Chicago Sportsman Once Was Treasurer of G. O. P. Committee.

By the Associated Press.

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 11.—George F. Getz, 72, millionaire Chicago coal operator and former treasurer of the Republican National Committee, died of heart disease today.

He succumbed in a hospital where he had been taken January 30 suffering from pneumonia.

The body will be taken tomorrow to Henderson, Ky., for burial beside that of his wife, who was born there. His two sons, James and George, jr., survive.

Getz was an enthusiastic fisherman and spent the winters here aboard his yacht, Virago, on which he entertained Herbert Hoover, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan; Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois, and other political figures.

He became Republican treasurer in 1933 after having bolted his party in 1928 to support Alfred E. Smith for President. Afterward he rejected a chance to become Democratic national committeeman for Illinois.

He went to work for a railroad in Chicago and entered the coal business in 1885. Upon his retirement several years ago he headed his own firm and was a director in several banks and corporations.

He was a prominent sportsman, hunting big game in Africa and serving as a member of the Illinois Athletic Commission. In 1927 he was a co-promoter of the second Dempsey-Tunney fight in which the famous "long count" occurred. He was general chairman of sports promotions for the Chicago World Fair in 1933.

Contract

A Limit to All Things.

The greatest players and, more specifically, the most experienced duplicate players agree that when playing match-point duplicate, third and fourth hand requirements for opening the bidding must be reduced from the accepted standards governing rubber bridge. This sound philosophy has been so well promulgated that all duplicate players are familiar with it. This, however, is not an unmixed blessing. I have yet to see any sound theory which does not become distorted or over-emphasized when it gets into the hands of the public at large. Let us consider a typical shaded bid, its implications, and its results.

Match-point duplicate.

	♠ 9 7 3 ♡ Q 9 5 ◇ 9 8 6 ♣ A J 5 4
♠ K 10 4 ♡ K 10 3 2 ◇ K Q 3 2 ♣ 8 6	West / North / East / South	♠ A J 6 2 ♡ A J 8 4 ◇ J 7 ♣ 10 9 3
	♠ Q 8 5 ♡ 7 6 ◇ A 10 5 4 ♣ K Q 7 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 N T	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

I do not contend that the opening one diamond bid was wholly responsible for the 800 point penalty that followed. Undoubtedly, North contributed by his silly run-out from one notrump to two diamonds. With North's holding, when the double of one notrump evoked a penalty pass, any attempted escape was just a shot in the dark. As it happened, two clubs would have been a better contract and a far better bid than two diamonds, but even this would have incurred a 500 point penalty, which is all that would have happened to one notrump.

It is not with North's inept handling of the bidding after it was opened that we are concerned, however—it is the opening bid itself. It has become quite a fashion among duplicate players to open in third position, vulnerable or not vulnerable, with such a holding as South's. This habit is to be deplored. True, South did not shade his honor trick requirements greatly from the prerequisite 2½, but his hand as a whole was so weak, his playing tricks (no matter what his trump suit) so few that an opening bid atuomatically contracted for a disproportionate number of tricks.

It is interesting to note that East and West could not even have made a game unless they landed in an awkward and virtually unbiddable four spade or four heart contract, and even then some remarkable guessing would be required.

Today's Future Too Uncertain, G. A. R. Commander Laments

JOHN M. KLINE.

One of the boys who answered Father Abraham's call for volunteers three-quarters of a century ago put down his newspaper yesterday, turned a quizzical eye upon the interviewer and said:

"We used to know where we're going but we don't now."

That's John M. Kline for you—rugged Republican, independent thinker and possessor of as keen a mind for politics and government as almost any other man half his age, which happens to be 90.

As commander of the Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, Comrade Kline was to have occupied a place of honor on the platform of First Congregational Church tonight when the annual G. A. R. Lincoln's birthday services are held. But he is alling and won't be there, except in spirit, to salute the memory of his idol.

The old soldier, who ran away from his country home at 16 to join the Forty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, felt kind of apologetic about having to run a whole G. A. R. department from a sickbed in his home at 3811 Gramercy, street northwest. Even though the department now consists of a solitary post—Kit Carson—and in that post are only eight veterans, including himself.

Just eight, Mr. Kline reflected, whereas once there were 2,000 in 15 different posts within the Potomac area. A mere corporal's squad—jolly William F. Dorsey, hale John T. Ryan, Charles Fox, Eugene W. Weaver, Henry A. Evans, Harry C. McCammon, Frank J. Young and Kline himself. All live here except McCammon, whose home is in Los Angeles.

When Lincoln's birthday was celebrated last year their thinning ranks numbered "Drummer Boy" John L. Clem and Fred W. Mixer and Philip Sattes and Albert L. Woodworth but they have passed on. But old Kit Carson Post, which called its first roll on March 27, 1867, in the basement of the Capitol will not surrender as long as there is a comrade alive.

It was just three years before its formation that Mr. Kline saw Abraham Lincoln for the first time. It was at Brandy Station, Virginia, and the green recruit from Milroy, Pa., got the thrill of his life when he saw the President, his long legs dangling below the stirrups, and General U. S. Grant come riding up.

Strong voiced, clear eyed, possessing a keen sense of humor and a veteran not only of the Civil War but of 53 happy years in the Treasury's service, Comrade Kline looks back upon four score year and ten with no regrets—except one.

He storms at fate for having placed him in Andersonville Prison, Georgia, at the time the gallant Sixth Corps—his outfit—was holding Washington against the forces of Gen. Jubal Early while President Lincoln stood under fire at Fort Stevens.

"But people today," he protested, "don't remember what the Grand Army was. Why, when the National Encampment was held here in 1892 there were 85,000 of us in line and it took from 10 in the morning to 6 at night to pass the White House."

I

Bob Burns Says—

I'm always a little suspicious of people who are so ready to call somebody else a crook. The other day I was talkin' to a lady out here who was suing her husband for a divorce settlement and she was kickin' about her lawyer bein' so crooked.

I says, "Well, what has he done?"

And she says, "Well, he came to me and said he had talked to my husband and he had gotten a fair settlement."

I says, "What's wrong with that?" She says, "Well, I didn't need to get a lawyer to get a fair settlement—I coulda gotten that myself."
